THE WOOL MARKET

MONTANA EXPERT LOOKS FOR BETTER PRICES.

T. C. Power, One of the Most Widely Known Stockmen of the Coast, Gives Reasons for Believing That Wool Will Not Be Lower This Year—Clip Will Be Light and the Old Crop Is Sold Out.

The Hon. T. C. Power, of Montana, one of the best known wool factors in this country, was in Boston the early part of the week calling upon the wool trade.

"All jobbing houses," he said, "are buying in a hand-to-mouth way, but the dealers throughout the country have sold out more of their woolen goods this year than in any other winter in a long time, which leaves the manufactured product pretty well used up.

"In fact, the output is more closely sold up than it has been at any other season in four or five years at least. As to prices, the jobbers of woolen goods seem to dictate. They claim that they cannot get any more for the manufactured product.

"I do not look for lower prices, because the wool is not in the country, and from a statistical standpoint the world's product never looked better. Being campaign year, all jobbers and dealers are working from hand to mouth.

"Farmers in the Middle West and in all the West, are doing well and getting good prices for their grain, with fine prospects for the future. On this account there is bound to be a good market for wool. This applies from Ohio west to the coast. Meat products are also looking up some. They have been depressed. The ranchman has suffered from the depreciation.

"The coming wool clip in the West will be from 10 to 15 per cent less in the number of pounds than it was last year. This is a conservative estimate and wool men here in Boston whom I have talked with who choose to express themselves, believe this to be true so far as Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Utah are concerned, and these are some of the largest wool producing states.

"The falling off in clip is causd by the extravagance in years gone by. There seems to be a general disposition everywhere to work along more conservative lines.

"The money market now seems to be steady, and those who are entitled to credit, those who are doing a careful and conservative business, can get the money. Confidence in the money supply is far better than it was six months ago.

"I am glad to see that there is no speculation in wool such as has been going on in cotton, as wild speculation such as this has been brings about curtailment and misfortune upon the manufacturer.

"The fact that wool has not advanced and in fact that certain grades have declined, is because there is no combination. The world's product of wool is just as scarce as cotton, but it is not under the control of any lot of dealers.

"Wool today is bringing fair prices to the producer, and at the same time is not high, averaging from 16 to 20 cents a pound in the grease here, and all classes sell at fair prices, particularly the cheaper grades.

"Australian skirted merino wool in the grease sells at 40 cents a pound in this market. Montana and Oregon, by careful breeding, will soon match and produce wool as fine as that from Australia.

"The farmers would like to see a boom, but because there is this absence of speculation wool will be consumed in a steady and more healthy way. I find that blankets and carpets made out of cheaper wool are advanced in price, but no material increase is found in wearing apparel."

A JAPANESE BARON

KODAMA WAS EDUCATED AT RUTGERS COLLEGE.

Is Remembered as a Bright, Level-Headed Youth, Who "Took to" American Ways and Institutions—Was a Student in New Jersey Institution Thirty Years Ago—Is a Military Man of Modern School.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 17.—Among the Japanese officers who have received their education in America Baron Kodama is perhaps the most distinguished among the army chiefs of his country.

Some 30 years ago he was a student in Rutgers college, and is remembered by many of the older persons here. At that time the sight of a native of Japan or China was quite uncommon, especially as a student in a college, and for this reason the boy attracted considerable attention. It was known that Kodoma belonged to one of the very old, powerful and wealthy Japanese families, but it was quite apparent from the time of his entering Rutgers that he was impressed favorably with the democratic, rough and ready ways of American students. He was a good-natured young man and very quickly made friends with his fellow students.

For a time Kodama had great difficulty in speaking the English language, although he seemed to understand it well. But before his course came to a close he could speak it fluently. At the time of entering Rutgers he was a little more than 17 and was well prepared to take up the work. He was rather short in height but well built for a boy of his years. He had come as a student, sent by the Japanese government, and throughout his course was very much in earnest with his work.

After his student days were over he went back to Japan and made rapid advances, owing to his mind training and American ideas of progress and education. He entered public life and came rapidly to the front, displaying signal ability in the organization of the army. About three years ago General Kodama was appointed second chief of the general staff, and has been actively engaged in preparing for the conflict with Russia. According to late cable dispatches he has now received the first command of the Japanese army in the field.

EVACUATION OF BOSTON.

Took Place One Hundred Twenty-Eight Years Ago.

Boston, March 17.—The 128th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston by the British on March 17, 1776, was celebrated with unusual spirit today, particularly in South Boston. Interest in the day's celebration centered principally about the monument erected in South Boston to mark the exact spot where George Washington, the commander of the Continental army, stood 128 years ago today as he watched the British troops evacuate the town.
