One day between the Lip and the Heart
A worldless strife arose,
Which was expertest in the art
His purpose to disclose.

The Lip called forth the vassal Tongue,
And made him vouch—a lie!
The slave his servile anthem sung
And braved the listening sky.

The Heart to speak in vain essayed,
Nor could his purpose reach—
His will not voice nor tongue obeyed,
His silence was his speech.

Mark thou their difference, child of earth,
While earth performs his part,
Not all the Lip can speak is worth
The silence of the Heart.
—John Quincy Adams.

WADE'S SHATTERED ESTATE.

The sale of the Wade personal property today closes one of the most extraordinary chapters ever written in the financial history of Eastern Oregon.

The humble beginning of C. B. Wade in Umatilla county 20 years ago, the gradual rise to positions of trust and financial influence, the phenomenal accumulation of all kinds of valuable property, the wide scope of interests throughout Eastern Oregon involved in his individual business, and then the sudden bursting of the bubble, the collapse of the great influence and financial standing of the man, and the unspeakable intricacy of the tangled mass of financial ruin, go to make up a chapter that reads like a romance.

Reaching out to every financial center and every industrial nerve of Eastern Oregon, the Wade interests affected more people than any other single interest in the entire state. Peculiarly distributed over a wide scope of country, and invested in diversified property as was the Wade estate, scarcely a neighborhood in the entire section of Eastern Oregon escaped a thrill of dismay when the collapse came.

From that vast accumulation of property all selected for its value and worth, just a mere handful remains after the crash. It was built on an unstable foundation. It is an evidence of the curse of unlimited credit to a man. Today the last remnant of the greatest single estate in Eastern Oregon is being parcelled out, 10 cents on the dollar, to pay the debts upon which the financial bubble was built.

While many of Wade's individual creditors will suffer, and while financial circles in Eastern Oregon were furried for a brief time, on account of the failure, the First National Bank, of which Mr. Wade was cashier, has settled its accounts in which it was involved through Wade, in a highly satisfactory manner, and is today stronger in the confidence of the people of Eastern Oregon than ever before.

The able manner in which the new cashier, G. M. Rice, has solved the knotty problems that confronted the bank at the time of the failure places him at the head of financial circles in Eastern Oregon.

Not only has the bank been strengthened by this settlement in the confidence of the people, but the business men and stockmen who suffered through Wade's misfortune, have been placed in positions to continue in business, with the unlimited confidence and financial assistance of the bank.

Order has been brought out of a financial chaos, and while but few people realize the individual effort it has cost, they realize that the Wade failure, as much as it concerned the interests of this county, has even now ceased to affect in the least the activity, the credit or the business of any man or institution in Umatilla county, except Wade himself.

The East Oregonian opposes the election of any corporation attorney, to a public office, no matter what the politics or personal standing of the man. Corporations have large interests to protect, pay munificent salaries for able men to look out for their business, and expect and are entitled to faithful service from those in their employ. On the other hand, the people have large and vital interests to protect and often those interests come in conflict with those of the corporation's and a public servant cannot serve two masters—he must either be on one side or the other. Where men are employed as servants of large corporate interests, they should be satisfied with that position. The people are entitled to the best servants possible, but it is better to have a weaker man untrammelled by contract with the corporations, than to have a strong man whose first duty is to serve the company which he represents before he became the people's servant. The corporations are entitled to all the consideration possible, as they do work in civilizing and settling up the new districts, that could not be done by private individuals. They have a right to the widest liberty consistent with justice to the people, but they should concede to the people the common right to select public servants outside of the ranks of the hired agents of the corporations. The corporation attorney must come and go at any time to suit the interests of his client, and in much of the litigation in which he would defend his company he would be arrayed against the people whose interests he would be sworn to protect and defend.

Attorney-General Bagley, of Idaho, was not so much opposed to the Bible in public schools, as he was the Book of Mormon and Mormon sectarian exercises, when he rendered his decision against religion in the public schools, yesterday. In some portions of Southern Idaho the public schools were attended almost exclusively by Mormon children, and were taught by Mormon teachers. It is needless to say that sectarianism, in the public schools of that portion of the state was running rampant. In fact, the schools were the rehearsing meetings for Mormon Sunday school lessons, Mormon songs, and Mormon scriptural meetings. Under these conditions it was necessary for the state to step in, and rather than deny the children the use of public funds, the state will bar religious exercises out of the schools. This decision of Idaho is not a blow at religion in its proper place, even though that religion be Mormonism, but it is a blow at religion and especially at Mormonism, as a dominant force in any public school.

The woolmen of Umatilla county may well be elated over the sale of Yakima wool at 12 and 12½ cents per pound. The wool purchased there was inferior to the Umatilla clip in every respect, and if an inferior grade brings this price, the Umatilla clip may be reasonably expected to bring from 1 to 2 cents and perhaps more than this figure. The effort of the buyers to hammer down the prices has failed miserably and the frank and honest admission of the management of the scouring mills, to the effect that wool will be even higher than last year is encouraging. The clip is of better grade than last year. The sheep are in the best condition for shearing. The old clip has been sold out of the country, and the demand for woolen manufactures is constantly increasing, so there is every prospect for better prices and continual brisk demand for Western wool. What is needed now among the woolgrowers is organization, co-operation, protection of individual members, and individual interests. The buyers are organized and work in harmony. Their success depends upon this organization and co-operation. Success to the woolmen will come through the same channels.

DRIFTWOOD.

Processional and Recessional.
We of the morning have sung to Pan,
We of the dawn have danced;
Whither the tides of sun-gold ran,
Whither the shadows chanced.

We of the morning have laughed at Life,
Kissed him our finger tips,
Drank with gladness and died with strife,
Jesting with careless lips.

We of the morning have dwelt with Spring,
Spring of the flow'r-sweet face,
Told of our loves on an idle string,
Prayed for a lover's grace.

We of the evening have dreamed our dreams,
We of the night have wept;
Stars have faded from twilight streams,
Stars in the skies have slept.

We of the evening have borne a cross—
A cross on a wintry hill;
Counted as gain where we reckoned loss,
Suffered, smiled—and been still.

We of the evening have had the morn
We of the night, the dawn;
Ashes of memory lie forlorn,
Whither to flame has gone.

The following epistle is from the pen of Eugene Field, written a short time before his death to a young admirer in Boston:

"Dear Little Lady—I thank you very much for your charming letter. It pleases me greatly to know that way off in Massachusetts there is a little girl who reads and likes what I write.

"Not so very long ago I was a little boy in Massachusetts. Maybe that is why I love its people so much, for, indeed, my heart turns often and tenderly to them and their dear old hills and pleasant valleys.

"I have several boys of my own now. When they are older I shall send them down to Massachusetts to see the girls there. If ever you see a fine young fellow coming down your street and crying at the top of his voice, 'Where, oh where, is the charming Miss Blank? you must know he is my boy. And you'll be gracious to him, will you not?"

"Well, I must stop now, for I must go out and shoot a buffalo or two for supper. Be sure to call on me if ever you come to this wild prairie town. Always affectionately your friend, Eugene Field."

An Eastern newspaper tells the following: A granger was at the Union station at Columbus the other day, telling of an occurrence on his farm. One of his employes was a German. He was a hard-working, honest and conscientious man, and was married. His wife was taken sick and finally died, the husband, of course, leaving his work several days in consequence. Two weeks later he appeared at the house of his employer and asked to be relieved from work for a couple of days, when the following conversation took place:

"I would like to get off for about two days."

"I can't spare you unless it is absolutely necessary. You know you lost several days a fortnight ago, and we are getting behind in the work. What is your necessity for getting off?" inquired the farmer.

"Well, I was to be married."

"Why, Fritz, your wife died only two weeks ago, and now you are about to be married again. I do not understand that."

"Well," replied the German, "I don't hold spite long."

The farmer dismissed the case without prejudice.

A group of university students out for a lark one day boarded a street car in an eastern city, and some of the musically inclined gave vent to their feelings somewhat as follows:

"In heaven above, where all is love,
There'll be no Faculty there."
"Now then, boys, once more and altogether," spoke up a voice from the rear platform of the car where one of the aforesaid faculty, a grave and dignified professor, was discovered enjoying the music.

Judge Deady, who once graced the Oregon bench, seems to have had ideas of his own of how to deal with juries, who did not do their duty as the judge saw it. A jurymen thus relates his experience with the judge:
"A feller was indicted for assault with intent to kill. I was a young feller and didn't know, you know, so I ups and leaves it to the foreman, so did the others, and they brought in a verdict of guilty of assault with intent to scare."

"The judge was hoppin' mad, an' he looks us all over and sez to the sheriff: 'Mister Sheriff, take this 'ere jury to jail an' lock 'em up,' an' he did."

Will Electricity Displace Pilots?
A Montreal professor has invented a device by means of which a ship can be steered into any harbor without the aid of a pilot. An electric cable is to be laid in the center of the channel and by means of an instrument on board of the ship the captain can follow the line of the cable.

Eighty snakes escaped at one time at the New York zoological gardens. The crowd was turned out and the entire force, with a detail of police, entered the work of recapture, which was not completed for three days.

Rheumatism

"THE PAIN KING."

Those who have ever felt its keen, cutting pains, or witnessed the intense suffering of others, know that Rheumatism is torture, and that it is rightly called "The King of Pain."

All do not suffer alike. Some are suddenly seized with the most excruciating pains, and it seems every muscle and joint in the body was being torn asunder. Others feel only occasional slight pains for weeks or months, when a sudden change in the weather or exposure to damp, chilly winds or night air brings on a fierce attack, lasting for days perhaps, and leaving the patient with a weakened constitution or crippled and deformed for all time.

An acid, polluted condition of the blood is the cause of every form and variety of Rheumatism, Muscular, Articular, Acute, Chronic, Inflammatory and Sciatic, and the blood must be purged and purified before there is an end to your aches and pains. External applications, the use of liniments and plasters, do much toward temporary relief, but such treatment does not reach the real cause or cleanse the diseased blood; but S. S. S., the greatest of all blood purifiers and tonics, does cure Rheumatism by antidoting and neutralizing the poisonous acids and building up the weak and sluggish blood. It is safe and reliable in all forms of Rheumatism. It makes the old acid blood rich, and the pain-tortured muscles and joints are relieved, the shattered nerves are made strong, and the entire system is invigorated and toned up by the use of this great vegetable remedy.

If you have Rheumatism, write us, and our physicians will furnish without charge any information desired, and we will mail free our book on Rheumatism.

HOLT BROS. Side Hill Combined Harvester

The latest improved two-wheel, side-hill combined harvester has proven a boon to wheat raisers. It is the most successful, most economical and easiest machine to operate ever built.

These harvesters have been given abundant trials right here at home and all users are highly pleased. None have been dissatisfied and all are high in their praise.

The Holt side-hill harvester on a side hill is able to stick to the side of the hill, while the header will slip down the hill. The main wheels are vertical, which braces the machine to the side hills. It works equally adapted to level land.

The Holt harvesters are sold exclusively in this section by
