How Famous South African Railroad Route Was Decided Upon.

It is sometimes charged that Amer ican financiers build railroads in rather a light-hearted, irresponsible way. But if they do, they must take

A queer story is told in Cape Town of how the first important trunk line in Cape Colony came to be built. Mr. Molteno was then premier of the colony. When he formulated his rail-way scheme he sent for the govern-across it in a straight line from Cape Town to Beaufort West.

"But you can't do that," exclaimed the amazed engineer. "It means that you will go slap bang at the Hex river mountains, whereas, if you curve the line a trifle you will get level country all the way.

"Never mind," said Mr. Molteno,

Some members of the Cape parliament objected to the route, but the premier told them they could take it SHEEK & COLE, CONTRACTORS AND or have no railway at all. As he was all powerful politically, they voted him $20,000,000 for the work after only a quarter of an hour's discussion.
