Proper Breathing.

The Japanese owe their amazing strength to this practice:
The Japanese, although men of very small stature, are among the strongest in the world. Any boy of 14 or 15, who will faithfully practice their system of producing strength will find himself, at the end of a few months, able to cope in feats of power with the average man of 25, and all this without the dangerous practice of lifting heavy weights, says, St. Nicholas.
It should always be remembered that rest must be taken after each exercise. While resting, try deep breathing. Stand erect, though not in a strained position, and at each breath draw the abdomen in and throw the chest out. As the breath is exhaled, let the chest fall inward again, and the abdomen outward. From 20 minutes to half an hour is a long enough time to devote to "ju-jitsu," and this includes the time spent in breathing during rests—for deep, correct breathing is in itself one of the best exercises possible.
In inhaling, draw the breath through either nostrils or the mouth, as preferred; in exhaling, always let the breath escape through the mouth.

Proficiency.

He was a cornet soloist, indeed, but by no means witless.
"Musical proficiency," said he, "is a matter of give and take."
"Eh? Give and take what?"
"Pains," he said, illustrating his notion by running a few scales.—Pack.

AN ANCIENT RELIC

SUMPTER PROSPECTOR MAKES UNUSUAL FIND.

An Ancient Tombstone With Almost Obliterated Inscription Thought to Mark the Last Resting Place of a Compeer of Lewis and Clark—Will Be Called to the Attention of the Exposition Authorities—Of Great Value, if Authentic.

James Erickson, a prospector who has been working in the mountains in the vicinity of Sumpter for some time past, was in town yesterday looking for someone who could direct him to the attention of the managers of the Lewis and Clark fair. He called upon Judge G. A. Hartman, who gave him the addresses of the men managing the exhibits and Mr. Erickson left to make himself known to them.
Mr. Erickson has found a relic and it may be of value just at this time, for the reason that it has, so he thinks, a connection with the Lewis and Clark expedition.
While clambering through the hills in the vicinity of Sumpter looking for gold signs, the prospector came upon a little valley or cup between two knolls. In digging about for "signs," he bumped into a large, evenly hewn rock upon which were some almost-erased letters and figures. His curiosity being aroused he dug the slab out of the dirt covering it, and cleaned the debris off the inscription.
From what he read of the lettering the slab had been a gravestone, and the fact that it seemed to have been at one time the top of a pile of rocks, lends credence to the opinion.
Mr. Erickson says the word "Clark" can be faintly traced on the face of the slab, cut in what have at one time been rugged letters, while some distance above is a fragment of the letter "L" and a part of a date.
It is supposed by Mr. Erickson that the slab was erected to mark the place of burial of one of the Lewis and Clark party. He will bring the matter to the attention of the commission and place his monument on exhibition at the fair.
