TALKS SOCIALISM

PERRY HOUSER ADDRESSES CLUB AT HOLDMAN.

Arraigns the Capitalistic System and Shows the Need of More Brotherhood—Cites the Statement of Douglas Belts Concerning the Futility of Honest Effort in Legislatures—Fraternal Societies Are Hurrying Toward Socialism.

Perry Houser of this city, a prominent member of the socialist club of this city, delivered an address before the socialist club at Holdman several days ago, and the following extracts are published to outline briefly before the people the socialist doctrine:

"Mr. Chairman and Comrades: I am not accustomed to public speaking. I never before attempted to address a political public meeting.

"I place no claim whatever on being an orator, a wit or anything other than a plain, blunt man, and as a man and citizen having seen the injustice and poverty within a country full of great resources and filled with a brave and industrious people, I have asked myself the cause and remedy.

"I think I have found it, and now I want to tell it to others. It is because I feel it my duty that I am attempting in my plain, blunt way, to tell you something of socialism. I have often heard speakers talk of the independent farmer, the horny-handed son of toil, the king of the land, etc.

"I come to you with no such talk. Though you may not be as dependent as the wageworker you are nevertheless not without your masters and will in the end be ground to powder between the capitalistic mill stones.

"When you fancy yourself free, open your eyes and face the giant railroad trust that controls the transportation of your products and nearly all you consume. Sit down at your table and return thanks, break the bread off the flour trust, cut the meat from the meat trust, pour the coffee from the coffee trust, in to the china of the china trust, put in some sugar from the sugar trust, and just imagine you can hear the demoniac laughter of all the trusts that exact tribute from you on nearly every article you use, from a sewing needle to a combined harvester.

"Then, after having contributed $5 or every $10 you produce to the various combines, go forth with your political candidate, swell up with patriotism and boast of this great land of equality and freedom.

"My friends, individual liberty, such as they preach, never did, never will, and never can exist, and were it possible to have an individual liberty you would have anarchy. Inequality and dependence is the order of nature. Men are only equal as respects their rights and by their governments they have denied themselves even that.

"Anarchy, as I understand it, says every man is a law unto himself; perfect individual liberty from every other man. Socialism, as I understand it, recognizes that man is merely a member of a society, a part of the structure, a unit of the vast sum; that he cannot even exist, much less enjoy any comforts without receiving some aid from his fellow man, and he can only succeed by granting to every other individual the same rights he claims for himself.

"In a perfect savage state this dependence was at a minimum, but as civilization increases man's indebtedness to society increases. As he receives instructions from the wise, both living and dead, and benefits from all the mechanical appliances which lessen labor, and operating all through the countless ages has brought about the present wonderful civilization. We are all heirs to the wisdom and achievements of our forefathers. Socialism, with stern justice, demands that we receive our heritage and pay our debts to our fellows.

"To my mind socialism is the effect of endless causes in evolution. Every age is confronted with different conditions and has new problems to solve. At different periods in the world's history civilizations, by disobeying the laws of nature, have gone down into chaos, but from their ashes as it were, has sprung a civilization vastly greater and more perfect.

"Nation after nation has become a thing of the past, but all of them have in some way left their imprint on the present. The Greek would today recognize the effect of their learning; the Phoenician his alphabet; the ancient Jew his religion. Why, were it possible for a citizen of once mighty Rome to be resurrected on our highways he would recognize the Roman characters on the American mile post.

"He would also be familiar with many laws and customs, as well as with many words in our language. These are only some of the many ways in which the present is affected by the past. Socialism, as we understand it today, would have been impossible in ages past.

"For example, take the laws passed by the legislature of Pennsylvania making it criminal on the part of the railroads to own coal mines or to manufacture articles to be transported, or to show favoritism in rates. Not a single prosecution under those laws, though they were enacted years ago, at the very commencement of the greatness of the Standard Oil company.

"Take also the interstate commerce and the present prosecution of the trusts by Knox. If they make any attempt to execute the law (which is unlikely), the only effect will be to drive the corporations into more secret business methods.

"But they find our worthy representatives too easy to handle to cause them much annoyance. Perhaps you have read the interview the East Oregonian had with Representative Doug Belts.

"He said, in effect, that he did not want to go back to Salem; that the whole outfit was run by cliques and that an honest man who went there trying to do something in the interest of the people was absolutely powerless.

"Great hope is felt by many that the labor unions will solve the problems and give to labor its just reward. Now, to my mind, while the labor unions, during times of prosperous business conditions, may wrest some concessions, they will in the end have absolutely no effect save to keep the business world in an unsettled condition.

"The reason that it will not, is because they do not attack the profit system. The only vital point since the employer has only to reset the price on the product of labor to shift the burden back on the consumer, where he is sure to put it and where the laboring world will sure pay it.

"The great question is not one of wages at all. It is a question of mastership or fellowship. The laborer will never receive the full reward of his labor until he receives the whole product.

"When the laborer strikes he does not do so to be free from his master. He acts on the same principle the capitalist does when he cuts wages—that is, the principle of greed. Get the most for the least, a principle that is unjust and prolific of abuses on both sides.

"Not that I do not approve of laborers belonging to unions. To do so is a necessity, and while they will surely be void of good results in the end they do at present halt the march of capitalism and serve as a stepping stone to socialism. Successful unionism, as we now know it, will not establish justice.

"However successful unionism is a chimera an utter impossibility, and for these reasons: The laborer is a dependent and the capitalist is in an independent position.

"I believe also that the fraternal orders are a great factor in the active movement toward socialism. Realizing the heartlessness of the existing social system, the inhumanity of man to man, and the utter failure of society to care for its helpless members, they have, as it were, withdrawn from society and are attempting to build up within themselves something of the brotherhood of man that socialism would establish for all mankind."

When the Sap Rises

Weak lungs should be careful. Coughs and colds are dangerous then. One Minute Cough Cure cures coughs and colds and gives strength to the lungs. Mrs. G. E. Fenner of Marion, Ind., says: "I suffered with a cough until I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by Tallman & Co.

LAKE BAIKAL RAILWAY.

Railroad Built on Ice is Not a Novelty in Russia.

One of the most interesting phases of Russia's military activity in the present war with Japan is the construction of a railway across the frozen waters of Lake Baikal for the purpose of transporting troops. A railway upon ice is not a novelty in Russia. For example, says the Pall Mall Gazette, the return of winter and the freezing of the Neva finds St. Petersburg possessed of an ice railway, which fills the place of the suspended steamboat service, while the Volga at certain points is crossed in similar fashion during the winter months. An ice railway consists of somewhat lighter rails than those used upon land and the rails are pinned to very long sleepers, (20 feet being the length generally adopted) in order that the weight may be distributed over a wide surface. A rough estimate of the cost of laying this type of railway is $175 per mile.

However, the Neva, Volga and other ice railways are only small affairs in regard to length compared with that which has just been opened to traffic upon the "unfathomable waters" of Lake Baikal. The latter starts from the riverside station of Baranchiki, on the Irkutsk shore, and terminates at the Missovia station of the trans-Baikal section. The steamer route between these points is 40 miles long, but the line makes a wide sweep in order to avoid a broken surface of ice left by the ice-breaking steamers and to allow the line being used as an auxiliary means of transit when the steamers begin running again; but the ice is still of sufficient thickness to bear the railway.

Two Miles That Pay.

The most valuable piece of railroad track in the country lies in the yards in St. Louis. The Iron Mountain and the Southern Pacific are Gould properties, but at only one place are they connected and that by a stretch of track less than two miles long. When Jay Gould died he willed this short piece of track to his daughter, Helen, and she owns every rail and spike in it. The transfer charges between the two roads over this track amount to $25,000 a year. Miss Gould does not have to keep up the track, furnish cars or anything else. All of that is done by the roads using the track and they must also keep the track in repair. It is said to be the best piece of paying track in the world.
