FROM HONOLULU

REV. W. E. POTWINE WRITES FROM HIS NEW HOME.

Speaks of Annexation Affecting the Business Interests of the Islands—Says Natives Complain of Hard Times Since American Rule Began—Immense Irrigation Plans and Sugar Plantations—Sends Kindest Regards to Pendleton Friends.

The East Oregonian is in receipt of the following intensely interesting letter from Rev. W. E. Potwine, now at Honolulu. Himself and family are well and enjoying the tropic clime on the mid-ocean. His observations on Hawaiian annexation are highly interesting and show the feeling in the islands as not many people in this country have had an opportunity to know directly.

After mentioning private business matters, Mr. Potwine says:

Our friends in Pendleton may be interested to learn that we are now settled in our new home in these islands, and are all pretty well. We had a pleasant and prosperous voyage on the fine steamer "Korea," catching the boat by the narrow margin of an hour and thereby missing several of our friends in San Francisco.

Honolulu is a typical tropical, insular city, recently beautified with many substantial civic improvements, but temporarily suffering from the results of "booming" the place by overconfident capitalists.

Its charms as a place of residence are many, and, for those who are able to retire from business, it affords some comforts and conditions not to be had in more northern latitudes. Its importance as a port of entry and as a strategic position in the Pacific is one which the government is bound to recognize before long. When that time comes business will pick up again.

Sugar holds the same place of importance here that wheat does in Umatilla county. The plantations represent large investments of capital, one of them having spent $400,000 on its plants for pumping water for irrigation, whose capacity is 75,000,000 gallons per day. This fact alone will suggest the value of the soil available for the raising of the cane.

Other products are limited, but experiments recently made with other crops adapted to hot countries give promise of more diversified agricultural interests in the near future.

My judgment upon the business prospects of the islands will not be of much value, I fancy. But from my observation and limited knowledge, I should say that it would be difficult for the man of small means to get a start here. Land values are ridiculously high and rents equally high; and while wages are fairly good for skilled labor, the cost of living here is considerably above that of the coast states.

Although "annexation" is now some eight years past, there are many of the people here who consider it a most unfortunate event in the history of the islands. Some of them are disposed to attribute the "hard times" to the change, and give as reasons for such facts as these:

"Before annexation the insular postal system yielded a handsome revenue which far exceeded the expense of the system. Its profits went into the home treasury, but now they go to Washington."

"Before annexation the revenues from tariff furnished plenty of money to maintain public works. Now there is barely enough to pay salaries and public improvements have to suffer. Foreign ships can no longer bring and carry passengers to this port and from it without being subject to a heavy fine, etc., etc."

I have not heard any one say that the yearly rainfall, or the average temperature have been seriously affected by "annexation," but according to some "soreheads," it is responsible for a good deal of trouble.

When the matter is sifted down it usually resolves itself into the fact that some very wealthy people are not accumulating money as fast as they used to; hence "annexation" is not for the best interests of the islands.

It is perhaps needless to say that there are those who do not reason in exactly this way, and who are glad to know that Hawaii is no longer a petty monarchy, a prey to the caprice of "kings" and "queens" and lesser potentates, but is rather an integral part of a great republic, whose growing importance and influence in the world give promise of great things in the future.

Some day, when you want to take a vacation, it will pay you to visit these islands, which are the most isolated in point of distance from the mainland of any islands in the world, but which have points of attraction and features of interest which are all their own. When you do so, I trust you will give me the pleasure of a long call. Faithfully yours,

W. E. POTWINE.

Weak lungs should be careful. Coughs and colds are dangerous then. One Minute Cough Cure cures coughs and colds and gives strength to the lungs. Mrs. G. E. Fenner of Marion, Ind., says: "I suffered with a cough until I run down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Idaho Wool Sells Well.

The wool delivery to the Lewiston warehouses has now been practically completed, the last large cargo being received last night from the upper Snake river by the steamer Spokane. This shipment comprised 400 sacks and the greater part of this shipment has been sold. The wool clip has been concentrated in less time this season than ever before, and has passed into the buyers' hands much earlier than common. The clip has been of an average weight and grade and the sheepsman have realized a good profit from their flocks—Lewiston Teller.

It contains no oil or grease, it will not stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
