TRYING TO BUNGO THE COMMISSION

INGENIOUS SCHEME TO GET FREE WATER SUPPLY.

Many Consumers Greatly Surprised at the Difference Between Their Summer and Winter Bills for Water—Commissioner Has to Be Alert and Resolute to Secure the City's Interests, and Has Unearthed Several Swindling Devices.

The waterman is having a hard time this month, and is having to stand all kinds of kicks, some of them just and many of them unjust. The first of May the meters were read for the first time since November.

In several instances, however, the kick is on the other side, and there are strained relations between the commission and the consumer. Some parties have been anticipating the coming of spring and summer when the lawns and the garden will need much water, and have had little pipes put in around the meter, so that when the hose is turned on the water will pass around and no record of its consumption will be made.

UNITED STATES' SUMMARY COURSE

State Department Reads the Riot Act to the Sultan of Morocco.

At the first information of harm to Perdicaris or Varley, marines will be landed from the American vessels at Tangiers and started for the lair of the brigands.

ASSESSOR STRAIN REPLIES TO TEMPLE

Pendleton, June 1.—(To the Editor.)—W. P. Temple published a signed letter in the Morning Tribune of the 31st of May.

He alleges that my assessment of last year is unequal. I have never pretended that I or any other man can entirely equalize valuations. But it is my aim to approach as nearly as possible, such an ideal assessment, and shall be glad to cooperate with taxpayers in every part of the county to that end.

Main street lots in Pendleton, in the best business portion, are valued at about $12,000 each, and assessed at $1,000. And the improvements upon them are added to this.

The Echo country has been developing rapidly. New land has been brought under irrigation since my first assessment, which has probably increased its value.

Land worth $1 per acre then may be worth much more at present. As I am away from the office now, and shall be during the whole week, it is not possible for me to answer Mr. Temple in detail, but if he will bring real errors in valuations to my notice, he will perform a public service which I shall appreciate.

I have made my valuations as public as possible (I wish they could all be published for criticism and correction), so all taxpayers may assist me in equalization.

THE WOOL POOL HELPS GROWERS

SHEEPMEN SELLING AT PRIVATE SALE LOST MONEY.

Same Quality of Wool Which Sold at 10 and 12 Cents Before Sales Day Brought 13 1/2 and 14 Cents at the Sale—Next Year May See Complete Organization of Wool Pool—Montana Blacklist Law Very Effective.

James H. Gwinn, secretary of the Oregon Woolgrowers' Association, is well pleased with the wool sales that have been so far conducted in Eastern Oregon this season.

The highest mark reached with Eastern Oregon wool this spring was 15 1/2 cents at Heppner, while a large portion of the clip in that county sold close to 14 cents. Last year there was but one grower who reached the highest point, while this season six men at Heppner sold at the highest figure, showing the undoubted benefits coming from the organization.

The buying has been spirited at both the Pendleton and Heppner sales and the sales yet to be held promise to be more interesting and important than either of these.

It is now seen that the private sales made before the public sales day, were losing propositions to the growers that sold, as the same quality of wool which sold for 12 and even as low as 10 cents at private sale, sold for 13 1/2 and 14 cents at the sale.

At Heppner the buying was so spirited that on one lot of wool 11 buyers bid on the price and all the lots had high bidding and sold well. The next sale in this city will take place June 16.

Mr. Gwinn hopes that by next year every sheepman in the entire range district of Eastern Oregon will be a member of the pool and will refuse to sell a pound until the regular sales days.

In the state of Montana the Woolgrowers' Association has adopted a regular blacklist rule, in regard to the sales days.

Any Montana sheepman who sells a pound of wool before or outside of the regular pool is barred from the benefits of the sales, and any buyer who buys a pound of wool before or outside of the regular sales is barred from bidding on wool offered in the regular pool. This has been very effective and has resulted in bringing the highest prices paid on the Pacific Coast, for Montana wool.
