GUEST WAS DEAF AND DUMB.

Night Clerk at Hotel St. George Had an Exciting Experience This Morning.

Fay McClung, night clerk at Hotel St. George, got a passenger up for the early morning east-bound train under difficulties.

O. H. Fay, a deaf and dumb young man, arrived last night from Spokane and left a call for the 4:45 train for the east, saying that he would leave his door open and the clerk could step in and shake him, as it was impossible for him to hear a call.

Instead of leaving his door open, the guest locked it, and left the key in the lock, so it was impossible to use the pass key to get into the room.

McClung was not to be defeated in his purpose to get the guest away on his train, so he opened the transom on his train, so he opened the transom had peeped in. The deaf man was lying asleep, unmindful of the frantic efforts of the clerk to arouse him. McClung could not get through the transom, the broomstick was too short to reach the bed, and he was about to give up in despair when a bright thought struck him. He went to the kitchen and filled his pockets with potatoes and slipped up stairs in triumph.

Now McClung is not a pitcher, short stop, infielder nor captain of a baseball team, and all his throws were wild at first. The transom was small and taking aim through a small opening, was demoralizing to his marksmanship.

One, two, three, four potatoes rained down on the bed, without effect. Ten shots were wasted on the sleeping guest still snoring sweetly.

The last potato in the pocket was aimed carefully with telling effect. It struck the guest fairly in the face, and as McClung finished telling him by signs and signals that it was time to get up, the train whistled into town and the guest caught it by a bare margin.

PENDLETON'S BIG WATER SYSTEM

CAPACITY OF BOILERS IN EXCESS PRESENT NEEDS.

Building Will Be Fire Proof Through-out—Steel Girders and Sheet Iron Walls, Roof and Doors—Spokane Expert Compliments the Water Commission on Excellence of the System—Calls it the Model System of the Northwest.

The old pump house has been entirely torn away, and the work of replacing it with the better structure has begun, the concrete foundation now being in. Brick work on the new building, which will be 45x50 feet in size, will begin in a very short time, and put through to an immediate completion. But before the building is put up, the new boiler will be bricked in and put to work immediately. The building will probably be completed by July 15 and the boiler bricked in and at work before that time. Weston brick will be used throughout. Van Dusen & Co. have the contract.

The new boiler cost $1000 and the cost of setting and enclosing it, and of finishing the new building will be between $4000 and $5000. The new building will be fire-proof—not nominally and supposedly, but actually, fire-proof. All the beams, girders and rafters and joists will be of steel and the doors of sheet iron.

The large boiler will have a capacity of 2,000,000 gallons in 24 hours, and the smaller boiler of 700,000 gallons in 24 hours—the entire capacity far in excess of the needs of a town of the present size of Pendleton, the commission having made estimates provide for the needs of the place for many years in advance.

R. E. Schorn of Spokane, president of the Northwestern Light & Power Company, in a recent letter to F. B. Clifton, highly compliments the Pendleton water commission on their system of charges and regulations, declaring that it is the best in the entire Northwest and a model for all towns contemplating putting in or revising their water systems.

Mr. Clifton, speaking of the prominence of people to think that a very little leak cannot visibly affect the city's interests detrimentally, calls attention to the following figures furnished by the Royal Insurance Co. of Liverpool: An orifice the size of a pin, with 75 pounds pressure to the square inch behind it will in one year's time emit 126,144 gallons of water; an orifice the size of a cambric needle will in one year's time emit 31,536 gallons, the pressure being the same.

MORE SHOOTERS ARRIVE.

Large Delegations Coming in for the Sportsmen's Tournament.

In addition to the representatives to the Winchester and Remington Arms Company, and the Dupont Powder Works, already mentioned, the following shooters have arrived today: O. O. Kincaide, Geiser, Matt Orr, Dillon, G. E. Dickson, James Stephenson, J. H. Van Gosen, and E. R. McDonald, of Ellensburg, and E. F. Conlar, of Livingston, Mont.

L. G. Becker and W. G. Burgess, of Ogden, and W. T. Sheard, of Tacoma, will arrive tonight, and 29 from California are expected tomorrow morning.

The local committees are working diligently on the final arrangements, and in preparing for the accommodation of the visitors as they arrive. Great enthusiasm prevails among the arriving shooters and they all look for the largest crowd ever attending a Northwest tournament.
