

Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in the back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend your medicine."—MRS. MAY HAULE, Edgerton, Wis., Pres. Household Economics Club.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

EASTERN OREGON'S OLDEST PIONEER

MOSES LORE OF UNION, WAS BORN IN 1799.

Came West From Montreal to St. Louis—Joined the Earliest Trapping Party to the Northwest—Worked for the Missionary, Spaulding, on the Clearwater in the Thirties—Sat in the "Wolf Meetings" at French Prairie and Hauled Wheat to Dr. John McLaughlin's Mill—Forty-Two Years on His Present Homestead.

A keen-eyed, quick-witted, nervous little man, hair white as the driven snow, with the brown skin of the French-Canadian, browner with a century's bronzing on the frontier—the oldest man in Eastern Oregon may be seen on the streets of the little town of Union, Union county, on any Saturday afternoon.

It is Moses Lore of Catherine creek, and he was born where Montreal now stands, seven days before George Washington, first president of the United States, died, in December, 1799.

His 105 years are carried lightly. His step is yet quick and his voice clear, although he says "ze fog comes to ze eye verlie oftin," and he can no longer see his rifle sights.

For 42 years he has lived four miles from Union on his little ranch in the shadow of the frowning Blue mountain cliffs. Three generations of his family have made his house their home and the county of Union, and the state of Oregon have been practically hewn from the wilderness, during the last half of his eventful and thrilling life.

His story reads like a romance and yet it is but one of thousands that might be unearthed among the pioneers of Eastern Oregon.

Born of French-Canadian parents where the beautiful city of Montreal now stands, in December, 1799, he imbibed with his mother's milk, the spirit of adventure. When but a boy he came to Detroit, then headquarters for all the powerful Indian tribes of the Central West. At 24 he came to St. Louis, then the outfitting point for that wondrous crusade of voyagers, Indian fighters, trappers, hunters and restless spirited frontiersmen, which pushed civilization into the Northwest.

He joined a private party of hunters, consisting of 30 men, bound for the virgin beaver fields of the Kootenai, in British Columbia, and after innumerable hardships and adventures they reached their goal.

For ten years he lived among the Indians around Pend d'Oreille and Couer d'Alene lakes, only seeing the face of a white man on the occasional visits of Hudson Bay parties to their Indian camp.

Tiring of the nomadic Indian life, and hungering for a sight of white men and white men's homes, he left the Indians and came to the Clearwater, where he worked for Spaulding, the associate of Dr. Whitman, for a year.

He recalls Spaulding's kindly teachings and remarkably humane treatment of the Indians and once warned the missionary of a secret plot among the Indians to murder all the whites at the mission.

He came on down the Snake and the Columbia and stopped at the Whitman settlement and then thrifting for the green fields of the beautiful Willamette he followed the resistless tide of settlement on down, westward, locating at French Prairie, Marion county, the Canadian settlement, where he took part in the formation of Oregon territory and stood by the government of the United States against the Hudson Bay Company.

He located a claim in French Prairie in 1829, married a half-breed squaw, from whom he was separated 30 years ago, and who lives today with a great-granddaughter, six miles from Meacham, in the Blue mountains.

He followed the ignis fatuus dream of gold to the California mines, sickened with scurvy, went broke and came back to his farm at French Prairie, content to raise cattle and listen to his bronzed wife croon to her babes in the shadows of the Cascades.

When settlement and civilization crowded thickly about his wilderness in the Willamette, he turned his eyes to Eastern Oregon, and was the first Frenchman to settle on Catherine creek, a settlement of French people which later became famous throughout Eastern Oregon.

That was in 1852 and he lives today on the old homestead. About his checkered and variegated life the whole history of the rise and establishment of an empire clusters. He sat in the "wolf meetings" at French Prairie, where the virgin empire of Oregon trembled in the balance. He hauled his wheat to Dr. John McLaughlin's grist mill at Oregon City. Was an associate of F. X. Matthieu, the only survivor of the 102 who voted on the establishment of a provisional government for Oregon and has seen the state grow from the "Old Oregon" to the new.

When he speaks of the thrilling scenes through which he has passed, since that memorable year of 1824, in which he turned his face westward from St. Louis—now 80 years ago—more than the length of two full generations of men, he taps his forehead restlessly and says: "Walt, walt; let me tink; dat ees many years ago; ze head some time forget, you know."

He will celebrate his 105th birthday next December, and is as cheerful and sprightly as most men of 50.

PREPARE FOR RACES.

Intercollegiate Regatta Opened Today in Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 28.—Everything is in readiness for the intercollegiate regatta. The course was officially staked out this morning and all the other preliminaries completed.

The contests are regarded by experts as the most open in many years. In the four-oared race Columbia and Pennsylvania are believed to stand the best chances of winning, as Cornell and Wisconsin are generally believed to be slower than last year. In the freshmen and varsity eight-oared races there appears to be no decided favorite.

The contests will be pulled off according to the following schedule, arranged so as to secure the most favorable condition in regard to the tides:

First race, 4 p. m.—University four-oared shells, without coxswain, between Pennsylvania, Cornell, Wisconsin and Columbia, distance two miles, for the Kennedy Challenge trophy.

Second race, 4:45 p. m.—Freshmen eight-oared shells, between Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Syracuse, distance two miles, for the steward's cup.

Third race, 6 p. m.—University eight-oared shells, between Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell, Wisconsin, Syracuse and Georgetown, distance four miles, for the varsity challenge cup.

The races will be witnessed by many thousands from New York and other points. Better arrangements than ever before have been made by the West Shore railroad for an observation train to accompany the crews over the course. The train has been especially constructed for the purpose and will accommodate an immense crowd of spectators.

He is Now a Strictly Sober Man.

Portland, Ore., April 26, 1904. Our druggist here asked me to write you about "TRIB." My son took "TRIB" about 18 months ago and has been a sober and industrious man since. He has taken the cure, but commenced drinking again soon after. It cost his $160 to take the cure and $12.50 to take "TRIB." He says "TRIB" is by far the best cure of the two. He has sold many treatments for the druggists since he took "TRIB." Wishing you success, I am your friend, J. L. STONE. For sale by Tallman & Co.
