The East Oregonian is Eastern Oregon's representative paper. It leads and the people appreciate it and show it by their liberal patronage. It is the advertising medium of this section.

In company with T. G. Halley a representative of the East Oregonian took a trip over the reservation yesterday. The farmers are wearing the smile that won't come off, and they have good cause to. The reservation wheat fields never looked better.

As far as one can see stretches a vast expanse of yellow-brown wheat. It stands in many fields level with one's shoulders. The head is large and the berry full and plump.

Many of the fields are going the estimated average. Among the fine fields visited were Snyder's, John Crow's, L. L. Mann's, A. M. Jack's, W. H. H. Scott's and others.

George Earnhart's field which has just been threshed ran 37 bushels average for the 200 acres.

A. D. Blue's 180 acres ran 35 bushels. These two were good yields but were not exceptions, as others visited will exceed 40 bushels an acre.

Combine at Work.

On the farm recently purchased from Mr. Rigby a stop was made to watch a Rigby-Clove combine working.

Arthur Rigby was in the conning tower and the 16 mules seemed to move along without any great amount of effort.

Mr. Clove, who was watching the work of the combine, said that the field would probably go nearly 40 bushels to the acre, as it is a very choice piece of wheat land.

Not far distant from this field could be seen a combine with 25 horses in W. H. H. Scott's grain. At our next stopping place we found A. M. Jack. He has 130 acres of leased land that has a splendid crop. About 10 acres had been threshed.

"If it keeps up all over the field as it has for this 10 acres, it will run over 40 bushels to the acre," said Mr. Jack.

The Harvest Scene.

To a person who has never watched a wheat crop being gathered the process is a very interesting one. Two headers circle round the field heading the wheat. Each of these headers are attended by four wagons which drive along beside the header and receive the headed grain.

The header wagon is driven beside the platform of the threshing machine, a hook is attached to the net and in 30 seconds the wagon is empty, a horse being the motive power that empties the nets.

The "hoe-down" men keep a steady stream of the headings going down the rapacious and capacious maw of the thrasher.

At the rear a large stacker keeps a stream of straw in the air. The funnel from which the straw is discharged can be moved in any desired direction to form the straw stacks.

The straw is used as fuel in the engine. A man being constantly employed in forking the straw into the furnace.

As we stood watching the busy scene a header wagon drove up in charge of a fullblood Umatilla Indian.

In answer to a question Mr. Jack said: "His name is George Thomas and he is a good hand. I pay him $2.50 a day for himself and team."

"We have got this thing down to a pretty good system. You see, we burn the straw as fuel, that saves carrying wood or coal and cuts out a large item of expense."

"We have dispensed with the straw-buckers, the stacker does that with no expense and much more satisfactory. By using the nets on the header wagons we cut out the labor of pitching the load from the wagons."

"We move four times in a quarter section, 40 acres being as large a territory as it pays to work at one setting. Moving is a short operation. The elevator is on wheels. The engine pulls the threshing machine. The cook wagons, water tanks and other paraphernalia are readily moved and the spouts are pouring out their steady stream of wheat again before you know it."

"We have got it down to a system like moving a circus. The only loss to the farmer is the straw. But they usually pasture the stubblefield till spring and then burn the stubble and plow it under."

"If it could be plowed under, of course, it would be better for the land, as it would return to the land the straw, but it is hard to work the straw under."

"It is an inspiring sight to stand on some high point and look over the waving miles of wheat nodding in the evening breeze. Much of it, though five feet high, seems level enough and thick enough to walk upon."

Diversified Farming.

Many a man has made a stake on one or two good wheat crops from land leased from the Indians. Here and there fields may be seen where the wheat has been bound and shocked for grain hay.

Here and there are fields of barley or oats.

Polydore Moens has 80 acres of potatoes that are thrifty and vigorous and bid fair to make a large crop. Instead of summer fallowing some of the more progressive farmers are using the rotation of crop system.

Potatoes, for example, will produce a good crop and more than pay for the preparation of the summer fallow. As an evidence of the way in which the ground retains its moisture in almost every field we entered the soil seemed dry on the surface, yet three or four inches below it showed moisture.

The earth clinging to the roots of the wheat when pulled up, was damp. Deep plowing and thorough cultivation is the secret of retaining the moisture. "I never saw finer wheat," said the E. O. man enthusiastically, as he looked at the full-headed, shoulder-high wheat in L. L. Mann's field. "For the very good reason," answered Mr. Halley, "that they don't grow better wheat than that anywhere."

"We have passed fields of wheat that will run 50 bushels to the acre and where the heads will average from two to four and a half feet above the ground."

"If you can tell me where finer wheat land is to be found, or where one can see finer wheat, I would be glad to know. I know men who came here five years ago and started to farming on leased land, who can draw their check for $25,000 now."

To any person who has an eye for the beautiful a glance over mile on mile of the golden brown wheat nodding in the evening breeze is an inspiration.—Fred Lockley.

Rosebud Drawings.

Chamberlain, S. D., July 28.—Today began the drawings for the Rosebud lands, the result of which will bring homesteads to many persons, while to countless others will come only deep disappointment. The registration books closed last Saturday and the drawings are for the purpose of determining the order in which the applicants will be permitted to make final entry and settlement. It is estimated that it will take about 3000 drawings to exhaust all the choice allotments. The final entry will begin a week from next Monday.

Weak Hearts

are caused by indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, the stomach expands—swells, and puffs up against the heart. This crowds the heart and shortens the breath. Rapid heart beats and heart disease is the final result. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, takes the strain off the heart, cures indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach and contributes nourishment, strength and health to every organ of the body.
