HORSES ARE STOLEN

HOLDMAN RESIDENTS ARE STILL OUT MANY.

Lutz, Kerr and Shafer Suffer the Loss of Nearly 30 Head—Band Was Driven into the Willamette Valley and Turned Loose by the Thieves. Who Were Afraid to Try to Sell Them.

C. L. Lutz and C. W. Shafer, of Holdman, were in town this morning. Both gentlemen had horses stolen during the general raid throughout that country of May 30. Mr. Lutes had two taken, Mr. Shafer six and Tom Kerr 14. The Shafer and Kerr horses were taken in one bunch, being on the range together.

There were some peculiar features of the theft and incident to it. In the first place, Mr. Lutz saw the horses they lost, at 5 o'clock in the morning. An hour and a half later they were gone, and as events proved, they were picked up and driven away with the drove stolen earlier in the night from Kerr and Shafer.

Further, all the stolen animals—not one was missing—were found in the neighborhood, or came voluntarily home, early in July. All were tired, tagged and gaunted and their hoofs split and feet jammed, and few of them will be unserviceable for some time yet on account of the treatment they had been subjected to. One of Lutz's horses was a mare which was a work horse pure and simple. She came home with saddle marks that she will never outgrow, and evidences of having been spurred. The 24 horses were not in one bunch when found, but they had scattered some upon arriving near home, and were grazing.

Every indication is that the entire 24 head had been driven into the Willamette valley and turned loose when the thieves found themselves hard pressed, probably by Sheriff Taylor, although Mr. Taylor could not find any of the stolen horses while in the valley. When he was there the horses were probably hidden, and were turned loose immediately after he left, or possibly while he was there.

The report is accounted as absurd that the animals were on the range in the western part of the county from the time of their disappearance until they were found, over a month later.

Kerr, Lutz and Shafer had competent men ride every section of the open range in the western part of the county for a week after the horses disappeared, and no trace of them could be found.

FISCHER COMPANY GOOD.

"Won on a Wager" Well Received and Howards Are the Usual Favorites.

Margarita Fischer and her company, in "Won on a Wager," at the Frazer theater last night, pleased all who saw the performance. The play is a four-act comedy, and as the man hater, Miss Fischer's work was as clever as when she attempts tragic roles.

Frank Clayton, and the entire cast, for that matter, appear to better advantage in comedy than in something of a more serious vein.

The Fischer company will appear each night this week, changing the bill each evening. Tonight the four-act comedy, "In Nevada," will be presented.

The Howards, who are seen in specialties between acts, bring down the house, as usual. They are the cleverest vaudeville people ever seen in Pendleton.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy. It's the best salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when burns, sores, ulcers and piles threaten. Only 25c at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.

MANNERS IN BUSINESS.

Brains and Good Deportment a Winning Combination.

Whistler was one day visited by a foreign artist, an old acquaintance with whom Whistler had not as yet quarreled. He was received with genuine cordiality, and, artist-like, he ran round the studio looking at everything. One small picture seemed to charm him especially, and he said, "Now that is one of your good ones." "Don't look at it, dear boy," said Whistler, airily, "it's not finished." "Finished," said the visitor, "Why, it is the most carefully finished picture of yours that I have ever seen." "Don't look at it!" persisted Whistler. "You are doing injustice to yourself, you are doing injustice to my picture, and you are doing injustice to me!" The visitor looked bewildered, when Whistler, in a theatrical tone, cried out: "Stop! I'll finish it now!" Then he procured a very small camel's hair brush, fixed it on a long and slender handle, mixed a little speck of paint on his palette, dipped the tip of his brush into it, and then, standing off from his picture and with the action of a fencer with his rapier, he lunged forward and touched the picture in one spot with his pigment. "Now it's finished," said he. "Now you may look at it." This was all highly dramatic, and indeed very well acted, but, as in the case of some stage plays, the final act of Whistler's performance proved to be an anticlimax. The foreign artist took his leave, but finding that he had left his umbrella behind him, called for it next day. The servant, recognizing him, told him that Mr. Whistler had gone out for the day, but invited him to go to the studio and seek his umbrella. He went there and found it, but also took the opportunity of having one more look at the picture which had been "finished" for his special benefit the day before, and then he saw that the little dab of wet paint which Whistler had so dramatically wiped off again!—Frederick Keppel in The Reader.

Tenants of the Big Sky Scrapers Never Get Acquainted.

The financial agent of a large insurance company in New York City, who had his office for 12 years in the same building with them and done business with the Chase National, he smiled at my exclamation of surprise and added that while his signature was as good as the gold at the bank, his face was unknown at the windows. I finally managed to secure identification by Mr. Spielman taking along the guardian of the vaults to first introduce him to the paying teller.

Chase National, and I went to Spielman for identification.

"He scratched his head, and solemnly informed me that he was not personally acquainted with any of the banking employes, although for a dozen years he had been in the same building with them and done business with the Chase National. He smiled at my exclamation of surprise and added that while his signature was as good as the gold at the bank, his face was unknown at the windows. I finally managed to secure identification by Mr. Spielman taking along the guardian of the vaults to first introduce him to the paying teller."
