THE RIGBY-CLOVE EXCELS THE BEST

COMPARATIVE TESTS OF TWO COMBINED HARVESTERS.

Clove Machine is Pulled by Fourteen Horses, and Operated at an Expense of $17.50 per Day—The Daniel Best, of the Same Size, is Pulled by Twenty Horses and Costs $22.50 Per Day for the Same Number of Acres—Shutrum Field Where Both Are Working, Visited by Party From Pendleton Yesterday.

Side by side in the Shutrum wheat field north of Pendleton, two combined harvesters are now running, a Daniel Best, manufactured at Stockton, Cal., and a Rigby-Clove, manufactured in this city.

Yesterday a party of Pendleton business men, accompanied by representatives of the press, visited the field and witnessed the big machines in operation.

The wheat where the machines are working is averaging about 35 bushels to the acre, one machine is following the other around the field and the comparative test of the work of the two machines could thus be fairly and honestly made.

Both machines are 12-foot cut, the Best machine is pulled by 20 mules, and is operated by four men, at an expense of about $22.50 per day, and is cutting about 16 acres per day. The work done by the Best machine in this field is not up to the standard, as many unthreshed grains of wheat, or "whitcraps," as they are called, are left in the threshed grain and many of the small heads are blown over, and not threshed at all.

The Best machine has a dull rumbling, choked sound, and seems much more clumsy and cumbersome, as it must necessarily be, with 20 horses or mules attached, and was moving very slowly, in order to allow it to thresh 35-bushel of wheat satisfactorily.

The Rigby-Clove machine is a 12-foot cut also, was pulled by 14 horses, no larger nor better than those on the Best machine, was operated by three men, and has the clear, ringing, hum of a threshing machine, and is doing its work well, at a higher speed, with less help, with six horses less, and under the same conditions. The Rigby-Clove machine is being operated at an expense of $17.50 per day, is cutting the same amount of grain, and is threshing it clean and taking it all out of the straw.

The teams on the Rigby-Clove were working no harder than those on the Best, and in fact not seemingly so hard, and the reason is plain to see. The Clove machine is rigged throughout with roller bearings, has no recleaning gear, which reduces the draft, largely, is more compact and closely constructed and is made lighter throughout.

Surprise was expressed by those witnessing the work of the two machines, and it was the unanimous verdict that the Pendleton machine was much more satisfactory from the point of expense, and the work done, beside being more easily handled and managed with the smaller number of horses.

The Rigby-Clove machine is equipped with a novel and simple side hill gear, which is operated by the driver from his seat. It elevates the grain easily, threshes it well and the running expense is from $5 to $8 per day less than that of the Best machine.

There are three Rigby-Clove machines now at work, the one on the Shutrum place, one at George Perringer's and one in Sherman county.

Mayor W. F. Matlock, who accompanied the party, and who had never seen a Rigby-Clove combined harvester working before, expressed great surprise at the difference in the number of horses required to pull the two machines of the same size.

STORY OF A SPOON.

One of a Souvenir Set Found After 14 Years.

In 1890 Mrs. R. C. Ward of this place was residing in Dayton, Wash. She owned a set of silver teaspoons which were made to order in 1857 for her, at Owego, N. Y. The set belonged to a full equipment of solid silverware, every article being engraved with the name, "R. C. Ward." They had, at the time of the residence of the family in Dayton, been in her possession 35 years.

During their residence in Dayton, and 14 years ago this summer, one of the teaspoons was missed and could not be found, under circumstances which indicated that it had been stolen, though there was not proof positive to that effect.

About a month ago, and 14 years after the disappearance of the spoon at Dayton, a man living on West Bluff street, in this place, brought into Ralph Ward's store a tarnished silver teaspoon with the name "R. C. Ward" and asked if that was the name of Mr. Ward's mother, Mr. Ward and other members of the family at once identified the spoon as the one lost at Dayton, and when it was taken to Mrs. Ward she recognized it also. It is, in fact, the lost spoon.

The gentleman who brought the spoon to Mr. Ward found it lying in the dirt in the backyard of his home on West Bluff. He recognized the name and thought likely the Wards had at one time occupied the premises and that the spoon belonged to them. The ownership was easily determined, but the Wards never lived on that property, and besides had not seen the spoon since it disappeared at Dayton 14 years ago.

Dr. Swallow's Campaign Tour.

Harrisburg, Pa., August 4.—Rev. Dr. Silas C. Swallow, prohibition candidate for president, has about completed plans for an elaborate campaign tour in the interest of his candidacy. Early next month he will start on a trip in a special car, accompanied by five speakers and a male quartet, and will visit the capitals and principal large cities of 30 states. He says he will be disappointed if he does not poll a larger vote than was ever cast for a prohibition nominee for president.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy. It's the best salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when burns, sores, ulcers and piles threaten. Only 25c at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.

THE FAIR

AS TO NICKNAMES.

Given Often for Absurd Reasons, and Generally They Stick.

"Wonderful how names stick to a person," said the observant man. "There were two nice little women in our village who came on us one evening, and we offered them passage which the children had just brought in from the kitchen. They refused, but not so emphatically as to keep us from giving them two helping plates of the corn. We kept rolling the plates and they kept crumpling all the evening. There was something so funny about it that I called them 'The Crumpled Ladies,' and the name has stuck to them so that the whole village knows them by it.

"I once knew a man who talked incessantly in a high pitched voice, and a leigh girl dubbed him 'The Chirper.' The name was quickly passed around among the young people, and now the greater part of his friends know him by that name. A dignified young woman of my acquaintance goes by the name of 'Whom' to this day because when she was a little girl she used to call herself 'Mrs. Whom' when she played grownup ladies, and the family picked it up. She simply can't shake the absurd name.

"More than one red haired man is known by the name of 'Pink' and philosophically accepts the title. I have an acquaintance who holds a responsible position who is known by the name of 'Dotty.' It seems that one day a mischievous girl discovered that he had three prominent dimples. She promptly dubbed him 'Dotty Dimple,' and now he is known to all his associates as 'Dotty.' Another man of my acquaintance is always called 'Bluebeard' because he has such a white and thin skin that if he does not shave daily his beard shows blue through it. That name, too, came through a woman's quick wit.

"In a certain household a very feminine little woman is still called 'The Boy' because when she was a young girl she went through a serious illness which made it necessary to cut her hair short. Her younger sister said she was 'the boy' of the family, and the demure lady is still called by that absurd name.

"An effeminate man was once called 'Viola' by one of the boys in the office, and now we know him by nothing else. Another one of the boys in the office is always called 'Chesty,' and though he got angry at first, he has cheerfully accepted the new name now.

"Our bookkeeper is always putting in his air when it is not at all necessary, and I think now he will be known until the end of time as 'General Batts.' A friend of mine who is always called 'Cheerful' does not know whether he is called that because his friends believe he has a cheerful disposition or because they consider him a cheerful idiot. But, at any rate, he can't shake the name."

Vermont Bar Association.

Burlington, Vt., August 4.—Several score of eminent jurists and lawyers are attending the annual meeting of the Vermont Bar Association in session here. A business meeting was held this afternoon, followed by a visit to the military post. This evening Justice Brewer will address the association. Ex-Senator Edmunds and several other men of national prominence are also expected to take part in the meeting. Tomorrow's program will be devoted to an entertainment, the chief feature being an excursion to Fort Ticonderoga, with the annual banquet on board the boat.

Big Missionary Conference.

Richfield Springs, N. Y., August 4.—The American Missionary Congress of the Protestant Episcopal church, which opened here today for a session of 10 days, has attracted a notable gathering of churchmen. Representatives of various Episcopal societies are present from the New England states, the Central Western states and the Southern states as far as Virginia. The congress will discuss methods of Bible study, missionary work, home and abroad, and other matters of general interest to church workers.

Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Calumet, Mich., August 4.—The Michigan Grand Castle of the Knights of the Golden Eagle began its annual session in Calumet today. Representative members of the order are in attendance from many parts of the state. The reports of the several officers show the Michigan branch of the organization to be in a flourishing condition as regards both membership and finances.

BURNING A WIDOW.

The Story of a Witness of This Cruel Indian Custom.

I had the opportunity of seeing a young widow burn herself by the side of her deceased husband. The funeral pile was about ten feet high. In the middle of the pile lay her deceased husband, an old and miserable looking man. The devoted victim was a young creature about seventeen, dressed in white, with all her jewels on. There was a confused noise of singing and shouting, intermixed with the sound of tom-toms and at intervals the hollow and sonorous sound of gongs and trumpets. The priests and her friends crowded round her, all speaking to her at once, apparently to distract her attention and to prevent her shrinking at the last moment from sacrificing herself.

There was a small tank of water close to the funeral pile. They led her to this. I was very near her when I saw her quietly take the jewels from her ears, her nose, unclasp her gold bracelets as well as the bangles from her ankles and every ornament she had on, which were received by her relations.

She then stepped into the water, divested herself of her clothes of pure white and replaced them with clothes of a yellow color. She then performed her ablutions, came out of the water and, unassisted, walked three times round the pile, followed by the priests and her friends, who at this period appeared to be more urgent and loud in their discourse to her to distract her attention. She then, unassisted, mounted the pile, laid herself down by the side of her husband and put his head under her arm, turning herself toward him.

Then they sprinkled large quantities of oil and straw on the pile. The fatal fire was then applied, and amid loud shouts and while the fire reached her I distinctly heard her utter the words "Nirva! Nirva!"

I was very near her during the different parts of the ceremony and could have saved her life by merely touching her, as she would then have been defiled and would not have been permitted to have the honor of sacrificing herself.

But in saving her life I stood the chance of being torn to pieces, and I certainly should have been brought to a court martial for disobedience of orders, for the English in those days were strictly forbidden to meddle with the customs and prejudices of the natives.—Georg Ebers' "Memoirs."

MEETING AN AUTHOR.

Robert Barr's Visit to His Friend Captain Mayne Reid.

Robert Barr, the author, told me how Captain Mayne Reid, who was a friend of his, came to London and sent his address to Barr. The latter started to call on Reid. He did not know the street and, asking a bus man if his vehicle passed such and such a street, was assured that it did. In due course he came upon the street. In his letter Mayne Reid said he had taken a corner house in this street and added that he had a delightful garden and a high wall. "When I got down from the bus," says Mr. Barr, "I found that the corner house had a high wall and doubtless behind it a delightful garden, which answered perfectly the description which Captain Mayne Reid had given me.

"I said to a policeman, because I wanted to be sure, 'Could you tell me where Mr. Reid lives?' And he answered, 'Do you mean Mr. Reid, the author?' And I replied, 'Yes.' So the policeman pointed to the premises I had already selected as the residence of my friend. Therefore I went through the gate without fear and rang the bell at the residence, which stood some distance back in the garden. I was admitted and asked if Mr. Reid was at home. I was told that he was and was shown into a room on the left hand side of the passage. Waiting there some time, an old, slippered man came in, whom I did not recognize.

"Do you wish to see me?" he asked. I rose from my chair and replied, 'I have called to see Captain Mayne Reid.' 'I beg your pardon,' he said very frigidly, 'I am Charles Reade,' with which he turned his back upon me and left me there alone. That was the only time I had the pleasure of meeting one of England's greatest authors. Captain Mayne Reid had taken a corner house in a street of the same name in Maiden Vale, some miles from where Mr. Charles Reade resided during his last days."
