NEW COLD STORAGE

SCHWARZ & GREULICH HAVE LARGE PLANT.

Well Equipped Ice and Storage Plant in Heart of City—Capacity for Storing Immense Quantity of Fresh Meat—Output is Distributed Over Large Territory in Eastern Oregon.

Few people even in Pendleton know the magnitude of the Schwarz & Greulich packing and cold storage plant in this place, or the volume of business carried on within it, and still fewer have ever taken a look through its capacious chambers and engine rooms. In general terms the existence of such a plant and the general nature of the business carried on are understood, but the number of people who have ever had curiosity enough to post up on the establishment by personal observation and inquiry is surprisingly small.

For instance, how many people know that immediately in the rear of the front room at 607 Main street, where the retail meat market so familiar to everybody, is conducted, is a room large enough to hold 75 beef carcasses and 150 sheep carcasses, and that it is cool enough to keep them perfectly fresh for an indefinite length of time? That within that cold storage room, which is on the first floor, there is 800 feet of overhead trackage or trolley, and that therein the temperature is never allowed to get lower than 40 degrees, and that it is often at the freezing point, or 32 degrees, and can be made to go lower than that?

The storage room mentioned opens directly into the retail room on Main street, and its rear door opens into the large room fronting directly on Webb street, into which are unloaded the fresh carcasses from the firm's abattoir in the western part of town.

In this last mentioned room the carcasses are dismembered and the various parts distributed throughout the departments where they belong: to the smoking room, also on the first floor, go the hams; to the trying-out kettles go the fat; into the pickling vats, also on the first floor, go the side meats and some other parts, and here and there in various directions go all the various parts of a carcass of any kind of an edible domestic animal, until all are as effectually disposed of as they would be at any Armour packing house. Practically the only difference between the two establishments is size—the methods used are as modern and cleanly and thorough here, and the finished product is just as palatable as anything that ever came out of Chicago, and a good deal cleaner than some of it.

In the rear of the cutting up or dismembering room is a sub-basement containing the engines used in the establishment. The motor power comes from a 25-horse power boiler which operates the ammonia condenser, the chopper and the trying-out kettles.

The condenser is of sufficient capacity to keep below freezing point the first storage room mentioned and the "pork room," which holds 3000 hog and mutton carcasses and also contains 1000 hams and side pieces almost at freezing point until there is room for them in the smoking chamber and the pickling vats.

The Schwarz & Greulich plant can make ice—is fully equipped for making many tons of the best ice per day, but the business does not require it, which is the only reason it is not made.

In the "pork room," which is in the basement, are 3400 feet of condensing pipe, every inch of which is covered with a heavy coating of frost on the hottest day. One can stand shivering in the front of this frost-bitten room and peer up through the grating in the Main street sidewalk and see sweltering pedestrians wiping the sweat from their faces, and can almost hear them scold about the hot weather. Against the pipes the temperature is always a little below freezing; for the entire length of the 100-foot room the average temperature is from 38 to 40 degrees during every hour of the 24.

One of the interesting places of the plant is the smoking room, where three tons of meat can be hung at one time. The smoke is real smoke—this is one plant wherein creosote and other substitute preparations are never used to preserve meat. Every ounce of smoked meat from Schwarz & Greulich's is actually smoked. The smoke comes from a furnace beneath the chamber, which is fed by Blue mountain thornwood and willow exclusively, either of which makes as beautiful clear smoke as maple or hickory.

The lard vats or trying-out kettles have a capacity of 1000 pounds of rendered lard per day. The chopper has a capacity of 1000 pounds of sausage—cut and seasoned and ready for the frying pan, every day. The pickling vats hold from 6000 to 8000 pounds of meat at one setting.

Aside from the city trade, which is but a small part of the business of the company, the Schwarz & Greulich Cold Storage and Packing Company supplies every small town in the county with the larger part of the products of such establishments that they use, and sends immense quantities of the same lines of goods far into the interior, and has an important and growing trade with the larger towns of the eastern part of the state.

EYES INCREASE IN SIZE.

Change Often Results in the Improvement of the Sight.

A conversation with a prominent doctor developed the fact that among men of large affairs where decided executive ability and strong mental equipment were requisite it was common to find an increase in the cranial development. A more detailed investigation among some of the large metropolitan centers revealed the fact that many of them had for years by means of an automatic measuring device kept records of peculiarities of the cranial outline of many of our prominent men, which had led to the discovery (to which, however, little importance had been attached) that the skull often shows a decided increase in size after middle age.

Thus, if it is a fact that the human eye depends largely upon the surrounding bony structure for its size and proportion, it can readily be seen that in the case of an eye which presents abnormal visual conditions due to an inadequate development the increase in the size of the skull referred to, accompanied, as it usually is, by generally improved physical conditions, would naturally tend to a corresponding increase in the size of the eyeball, thereby contributing to a possible neutralization of the visual defect.—Lewiston Journal-Weekly.

LOCKS AND KEYS.

Their Use Can Be Traced Back to the Ancient Egyptians.

According to Denon, locks and keys can be traced back to the ancient Egyptians, more than 4000 years ago. This is inferred from the sculptures on the great temple of Karnak, which closely resemble locks still in use there—cumbrous, massive wooden locks, in which three pins drop into three holes in the bolt, when it is pushed in, and are raised by corresponding fixed pins on the big key. Similar locks and keys are found at Mosul, near Nineveh, the key being more than a foot long, quite obsolete and often carried on the shoulder.

Keys are also mentioned at the siege of Troy, 1103 B. C. The Phoenicians are said to have exchanged locks for tin from Cornwall. Occasional notices of them occur in many Greek and Roman writers, Pliny ascribing their invention to Theodorus of Samos. Bronze and iron keys have been found in the ruins of Pompeii.

Possibly far more ancient than these are Chinese locks, with springs and tumblers, some of them musical, almost exact counterparts of the famous Bramah locks of England in the eighteenth century.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, promoted it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea-spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J.
