

DRAWING HOMES

BONESTEEL UNDER MARTIAL LAW THIS WEEK.

Drawing Claims on the Rosebud Reserve Now in Progress—One Hundred Names Will Be Called Each Day From the Registration Books Until the Entire Area of Land is Exhausted.

Bonesteel, S. D., Aug. 8.—The town of Bonesteel is under martial law and will remain so until September 10, when the period for filing claims to the Rosebud lands will expire.

Several troops of state militia are here. Their duty is to keep close guard over the land office, where thousands of dollars will be deposited daily during the filing period, and to see in general that order is maintained throughout the town. Special care will be taken to prevent the lawless element from gaining entrance to the town, the orders issued to the troops requiring them to meet each arriving train and to see that no passenger is permitted to alight unless he can prove that he comes on legitimate business. The plans for the preservation of order have been carefully laid and the authorities do not apprehend any serious trouble.

Beginning today 100 names will be drawn each day until the reservation lands are entirely appropriated. Each person is required to be present to respond when his name is called.

In case there is a failure to respond the name will be passed and again called in the evening, just before the closing of the office for the day, and a second failure to respond will forfeit all rights acquired by the drawing.

As the drawing results in no blanks but merely places in a particular numerical order all the names registered, the list is unlimited from which to call for filings, but the first 3000 names will without doubt entirely exhaust the lands.

LINOTYPERS' DISEASE.

New Malady for Printers With Advent of Machines.

With the advent of the linotype machine, which has proven one of the greatest labor saving devices of modern times and which has revolutionized journalism, has come a new disease, says the Oregon Sunday Journal. It is peculiar only to linotypers and those who work near the machines and the cause is attributed to the emanations which rise from the molten metal used in the operation of the machine. It is called linotyper's disease.

S. C. Killen, foreman of the Journal composing rooms, is the first linotyper of this city to be attacked with the malady. He has been ill since the first of July and has been under the constant care of Dr. J. T. Walls. At first the doctor was much perplexed over the malady which affected Mr. Killen, but at last noticed that there were both symptoms of lead and antimony poisoning.

At last the physician concluded, after a careful study of the case, that the disease had been caused by breathing the fumes from the molten metal of the machine, which metal is composed for the most part of antimony and lead. He began to treat the patient in order to counteract both antimony and lead poisoning and Mr. Killen began to improve and is now almost recovered. Another case has recently come under the notice of the doctor.

In many respects the symptoms are very like those of lead poisoning. There is no vomiting or other evidence of intestinal trouble, but there is muscular tremor of the upper limbs, with tenderness on pressure over the palms and soles. Other symptoms as the microscopical changes of the skin are identical with those produced by a metal of the nitrogen or arsenical group and not those produced by lead. The antimony has a tendency to destroy the red corpuscles which carry the oxygen and this gives the patient a pale complexion.

MARIS' NEW POSITION.

Former Manager of Wade Blooded Cattle Now With Rural Spirit.

N. C. Maris, well known in Umatilla county as manager of the famous C. B. Wade herd of thoroughbred cattle, is now field editor of the Rural Spirit, and speaking of his work, that paper in a recent issue says:

N. C. Maris, field editor of the Rural Spirit, has just returned from a month's visit to the breeding farms of California, of which due notice will be made in future issues.

Mr. Maris reports a lively interest being taken in the livestock business in the Golden state, which promises to be one of the leading industries in the near future. A number of prominent breeders are fitting show herds for the California state fair, and promise to make this department the best ever held. Some of the breeders are talking of making the northern circuit with their show herds and lock horns in a friendly contest with the Oregon and Washington breeders.

There should be a closer relation between the California and Oregon stockmen, and we hope the breeders there will break the ice by coming up this fall.

Another pamphlet is now being printed at the state printing office for distribution at the St. Louis World's fair. It is issued by the Lewis and Clark Fair commission, and is entitled "Agriculture in Oregon," by Hon. Wallis Nash of Portland. Mr. Nash is well versed in such matters, having been connected with the board of regents of the Oregon Agricultural college for several years, and made a study of the work done at the experiment station. Besides he is a farmer of practical experience, and has spared no pains to gather reliable data in compiling the work. He is a versatile writer, and on this theme, which offers scarcely any limit for enlarging, has certainly done himself credit. The book contains 32 pages and will be completed by about September 1. The issue will be 50,000 copies.
