WAS HEADSTONE A JOKE?
 Monument Found in Seattle Bay Dated in 1460.
 Who was John Clay, who died nearly 450 years ago, and how did his tombstone find its way into the mud on the shores of Elliot bay, 27 feet below the surface? says the Seattle Star.

Unless some practical jokes come forward to explain, Seattle will soon have a mystery as deep as that of the famous Calaveras skull, and the foregoing are the questions local savants will ask in vain of a mite bit of grey sandstone exhumed by workmen engaged in excavating for the foundation of a new building at 106 Railroad avenue, between Washington street and Yeiser way, this morning.

The piece of stone is about three inches thick and a foot square. On one side is the inscription "John Clay, who died—," and on the other side the date "October 1st, 1460."

The letters appear to have been carved recently and the stone is not weather worn. The slab is alleged to have been dug out of the black muck, which is full of the driftwood of the old beach, at the depth of 27 feet.

Of course, if the histories are wrong and Columbus did not sail the ocean blue in 1492, there is an explanation.

Those who take the discovery seriously believe the stone is a genuine relic from old England, and was lost overboard from some ship entering Seattle harbor many years ago.

"WIZARD" BURBANK.

Originator of Burbank Potatoes Will Experiment With Sugar Cane.

Two great scientists met in Santa Rosa today, says the San Francisco Examiner. Luther Burbank, the "wizard of horticulture," and Dr. Hugo de Vries of the University of Amsterdam. The latter is an eminent botanical scientist who is lecturing at the summer school at Berkeley. The scientists enjoyed a long and earnest discussion on Burbank's great work in the realm of plant life.

It will not be long before Burbank will revolutionize the world of the sugar cane. Sometime ago the planters of the Hawaiian islands and other places where sugar is grown asked Burbank to provide them with a new specie of cane, one that would not be as large as that grown on the island plantations, but which would contain as much and more saccharine matter. For two or three years, Burbank has been evolving his great work of hybridization with considerable success.

From all over the known world Burbank has been receiving letters by the hundred regarding the progress of his work in the creating of the potato with which he is to revolutionize the potato family, the species "with inside of pink." The potato is not perfected yet.

SELF-PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

Remarkable Ingenuity is Displayed in Building Their Nests.

The ingenuity of many birds in building nests in such a way as to protect them from the attacks of rivals and enemies is wonderful, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The long, hanging nest of the oriole and the dome shaped nest of the wren are remarkable for their place and manner of construction.

Perhaps the oriole of Central America is not surpassed in this respect by any other bird. It builds its nest in the banana tree. Selecting a large banana leaf, and with its bill for a needle and some strong grass for thread, it sews the two edges together, following the grain of the leaf close by one of the veins. It does its work so deftly and neatly that it takes a close examination to detect the stitches.

In this cunningly devised pocket the little bird makes a nest of soft grass or of hair and there lays her eggs and raises her little family without fear of discovery.

DAIRIES IN DENMARK.

Richest Daily Country in the World is Filled With Small Dairies.

From a department publication it is learned that 20,000 farmers in Denmark own one cow each; 27,000 farmers two cows each; 25,400 from six to nine cows each; 19,800 from 10 to 14 cows each; 29,800 from 15 to 29 cows each; 5,800 from 30 to 49 cows each; 1440 from 50 to 99 cows each; while 6762 own 100 cows or over. This illustrates forcibly that the dairy farms in Denmark are small and that comparatively few people own many cows.

Alexander Sutherland, the bugler who led the charge of the famous light brigade at Balaklava, is living in the city of Denver, Col. He is 94 years of age, but has expressed a desire to attend the St. Louis fair in response to an invitation received from the school children of that city.
