BEAUTIFYING MANILA.

Government Spending $6,000,000 on Public Improvements.
Under the direction of this government more than $6,000,000 is to be expended in improving and beautifying the city of Manila.
Final arrangements for the expenditure of this amount have just been concluded between Maj. J. F. Case, engineer for the city of Manila, who has been in Washington in consultation with Mr. Taft, the secretary of war, and Clarence Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs.
Work will begin immediately on a water works system to cost $4,000,000 and a sewer system to cost $2,000,000.
Major Case's plans for the water and sewer systems of Manila have been approved by Desmond Fitzgerald, a great authority on municipal engineering, who recently returned from a trip to the Philippines.
Congress has made it possible for the Philippine government to issue sufficient bonds to construct the water and sewer systems, and work will begin immediately. The bonds will probably not be issued before Jan. 1.
Mr. Burnham, a Chicago landscape architect will go to Manila in a short time to inspect the city and will report plans for the beautification of the city, which is to be accomplished at a cost of $2,000,000 or more. The esteros, or open waterways, are to be straightened and freed of all sewage and parks are to be laid out. The walled city is to be preserved and put in first-class sanitary condition.
Failure of American iron manufacturers to take any interest in work in the Philippines is a great surprise to Major Case, who has been authorized by Secretary Taft to visit American steel manufacturers and lay before them the advantages of trade in the orient. German companies are getting all the steel contracts in the islands. The Ayala bridge, a gigantic structure over the Pasig river, is to be built by German contractors.

AUTOMATIC FIREMEN.

Contrivance Which Threatens to Supplant Locomotive Stokers.
Automatic stokers for locomotives, to replace firemen, were tested and recently reported on to the effect that there is a saving of not less than 7 per cent when using the stoker, as compared with the work of a first-class fireman, says the Chicago Tribune.
The saving was attributed to the fact that when using the stoker the coal is much more evenly distributed, and the furnace door remaining closed all the time, the smoke is of a far lighter color, indicating a much more thorough consumption of gases.
The darkest shade of smoke is brown, while most of the emission from the stack shows pure steam. The use of the stoker enables the steam pressure to be kept absolutely constant. This is due to the regularity with which the coal is placed on the grate, the evenness with which it is distributed, and also the fact that the furnace door is not open, and hence the furnace is not cooled by the inrush of air.
With the coal conveyor in service the labor of raising the coal in the hopper will be entirely dispensed with, and the work of the fireman becomes simply that of an expert in charge of an efficient machine.
In the ordinary type of engines there is no necessity whatever for the stoker, as the fireman must be there anyway, and his work is such that an ordinary man can execute with ease; but with the long fire-box type of engine, on a long run comparatively free from grades, where the engine is loaded to its maximum capacity all the time, the automatic stoker should be found most valuable, as a machine will not tire, and consequently will enable the engine to carry maximum pressure all the time and get full benefit of the tractive power of the engine over a long, continuous trip.

MEXICAN GOAT RAISING.

American Consular Agent Tells of a Profitable Industry.
William Headen, consular agent at Puebla, Mexico, sends the following interesting letter to the department of commerce and labor on "Goat Raising in Old Mexico":
The ordinary domestic goat, so well known in the United States, is the species raised throughout Mexico. It is valued for its pelt, its tallow and its flesh, both fresh and dried. As yet no use has been made of either horns or hoofs. In the vicinity of San Luis Potosi the entrails have been spun into long strings of so-called catgut, and the finer and more delicate strings have been profitably exported by mail in small parcels, to Chicago and New York.
The Angora breed is not appreciated in Mexico, though it finds favor in Western Texas, near the Mexican border. If of pure blood and if neglected
