diverted to the old channel, under the truss, says the Walla Walla Union.

Some of the property owners up the stream are proposing to straighten the river course still further, and remove obstruction from the bed of the stream, which it is hoped, will prevent the river from further wandering in the vicinity, and will provide a large amount of valuable land for cultivation.

With the expenditure of from $400 to $700 on the work of straightening the river, according to the county surveyor, over 20 acres of valuable land would in a few years be the equal of any of the land around it, which is now growing alfalfa, and is valued at $100 per acre.

It would be necessary to remove all trees and logs and other obstructions which have become imbedded in the bed of the stream, and which serve to throw the water during freshets, against the banks, doing much damage.

Don't Like Hunters' License.
County Game Warden Frank B. Morse is looking for a number of young men, whom it has been reported to him, have been hunting without first taking out a hunter's license. The game warden says that a great many hunters are of the opinion that the law compelling the payment of $1 for a permit to hunt is unconstitutional, as a Judge of the superior court at Spokane so declared it. This question has never been passed upon by the court in this county, and until there is a decision from the state supreme court, Warden Morse will continue to enforce its provisions.—Walla Walla Statesman.
