Charles Hoyl's best play will be presented at the Frazer tomorrow might. September 20 It is a most laughable satire on present day, politick, and the story opens in Texas with the election of "Maverick Brander." the cattle king of congress. "Brander" is a modest, man, and does not seek office. The election takes place during his absence from

The first information that "Branhas of his election that has been brought about by the instrumentality of three local politicians, Messes. Yell, Brag and Blow, is when he is yanked off his wagon on his peaceful way home, crowned with laurel as was Cincinnatus, and brought in on the shoulders of four men. followed by the riff-raff of the frontier town.

There is some difficulty to get him o serve, but this is overcome when the gang point their guns at his head and declare that if he is perhaps too good to represent them in congress he is perhaps too good to live. "The "Brander" family is next seen n a reception room at the Arlington notel in Washington, and the scene teems with amusing incidents, consequent upon the newness of the family o Washington and its devious ways. Between the first act and the secand, sufficient time is supposed to have elapsed for the "Brander" family to get acquainted with the town: social friction has smoothed the general appearance, manners and habits of the family. The cattle king now wears his dress suit with the case of a man about town, smokes Perfectos, and hankers after frozen absinthe.
