"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.
Order, said the law court;
Knowledge, said the school;
Truth, said the wise man;
Pleasure, said the fool;
Love, said the maiden;
Beauty, said the page;
Freedom, said the dreamer;
Home, said the sage;
Fame, said the soldier;
Equity, the seer.

Spake my heart full sadly—
"The answer is not here."

Then within my bosom,
Softly this I heard—
"Each heart holds the secret—
Kindness is the word."
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

The editor of the morning paper does not believe in mediums nor clairvoyants. The seven free "readings" he has taken have just been taken for amusement. When told of a wedding ceremony to occur in Pendleton next May, at his first free seance with a medium, the editor of the morning paper decided to try six more seances, evidently thinking if one "confab" with the spirits resulted so happily, seven communications would increase the joyful anticipations seven-fold. Keep cool. Be calm. Nothing is going to happen.

One of the most pathetic sides of the Lewis and Clark expedition is the fact that although the explorers carried an unlimited letter of credit from President Jefferson, pledging the United States government to pay any amount contracted by the exploring party for necessities or equipment, yet the party was forced to eat their horses, Indian dogs and wolves and at Astoria the rawhide thongs of their leggings were boiled into soup. Out of such supreme privation has sprung the infinite plenty of the Oregon country of 1904. Could there be a more sacred cause for commemoration than that of the expedition of these heroes who are now on the tongues of the American people? As more Oregon history is read by the people, the more thrilling becomes the rescue of this Northwest territory from the dominion of Great Britain.

The general passenger agents of the transcontinental lines that run into Portland, who have made it their business to study public feeling throughout the country regarding our Lewis and Clark fair, say that the travel to this city from all points of America gives promise of being surprisingly heavy next summer, says the Lewis and Clark Journal, of Portland. "Exposition specials" have been already arranged for by all these roads, and these sumptuously equipped trains, put on as extras, will make record-breaking time. The distance between Chicago and Portland will be made in two and a half days, instead of three days as heretofore, and only two stops west of Omaha will be made by these flyers, as it is maintained that there will be weight enough to the traffic to fill the trains east of Omaha. According to these passenger men the travel will be heavier than the general public dreams of.

Readers of the Daily East Oregonian remember the Associated Press news service used by this paper several years ago. It was so incomplete, unsatisfactory and clumsy that it was discarded and the present Scripps-McRae afternoon news service adopted. The Associated Press morning service sold to country papers consists of from eight to twelve long news items each day, usually a clumsy rehash of the news of the previous day, while the afternoon service of the Scripps-McRae Association consists of from 25 to 40 live, snappy, concise items covering the news field of the entire world, up to the hour of going to press. The afternoon Associated Press franchise for Pendleton is now open and the East Oregonian could get it for the asking, but it prefers the service now being used. The Baker City Herald uses the afternoon Associated Press service and that paper's telegraphic service averages about 10 items per day, or a little better than the morning service used by the Baker City Democrat and the Pendleton Tribune. The afternoon service gets the day's news while it is fresh, and places it in the homes of readers in the evening, when every class of people has the most time and inclination to read.

The resolutions, speeches, parades, picnics and other features of the Ontario irrigation meeting are insignificant compared to the splendid exhibit of irrigated products seen there. These are the realities of irrigation, the speeches are but the theoretical habblings of the subject. It was fitting that the convention should be held in the midst of the prolific products of the art of irrigation. It is impossible that a delegate to that convention could go away from the meeting without an increased ardor for and a higher understanding of the subject. Lying in the heart of the sagebrush desert, the little irrigated settlement of Northern Malheur county is a veritable garden spot, the dreary wastes reaching up to the very borders of the orchards and alfalfa fields. Happy families are now living contented, useful lives on the once arid desert. A useless waste has been converted into a productive settlement, producing taxes for the support of the state and inviting the idle from the cities to the broader sphere of usefulness in the pleasant life of the farm.

THE GRAND CANYON.

I am going to paint a picture with a pencil of my own;
I shall have no hand to help me, I shall paint it all alone;
Oft I fancy it before me and my hopeful heart grows faint,
As I contemplate the grandeur of the picture I would paint.

When I rhyme about the river, the laughing limpid stream,
Whose ripples seem to shiver as they glide and glow and gleam,
Of the waves that beat the boulders that are strewn upon the strand,

You will recognize the river in the Canyon of the Grand.

When I write about the mountains with their heads so high and hoar,

Of the cliffs and craggy canyons where the waters rush and roar,

When I speak about the walls that rise so high on either hand,

You will recognize this rockwork in the Canyon of the Grand.

God was good to make the mountains, the valleys and the hills,

Put the rose upon the cactus, the ripple on the rilla;

But if I had all the words of all the worlds at my command,

I couldn't paint a picture of the Canyon of the Grand.

—CY. WARMAN.

It is said that Japan would be willing to entertain a peace proposal after she captures Mukden and Sakhalin, on this basis: That an international syndicate take over the Manchurian railroad and operate it as a purely commercial enterprise; that Russia pay Japan 100,000,000 pounds sterling indemnity; Japan to hold all the Russian vessels now in Chinese waters, and maintain a commercial suzerainty over Korea. An American company has offered to lease Sakhalin from Japan at $25,000,000 for a long term of years.

MALARIA IN THE SYSTEM

Holly Springs, Miss., March 24, 1903. While building railroads in Tennessee some twelve years ago a number of hands contracted fever and various forms of blood and skin diseases. I carried S. S. S. in my commissary and gave it to my hands with most gratifying results. I can recommend S. S. S. as the finest preparation for Malaria, chills and fever, as well as all blood and skin diseases. W. I. MCGOWAN.

I suffered greatly from Boils, which would break out on different parts of my body. I saw S. S. S. advertised and after using about three bottles I was cured, and for the last three years have had no trouble whatever. A. W. ZEBER. 217 Read St., Evansville, Ind.

I began using your S. S. S. probably ten years ago for Malaria and blood troubles, and it proved so good that I have continued ever since using it as a family remedy. It is a pleasure for me to recommend S. S. S. for the benefit of others who are needing a first rate blood purifier, tonic and cure for Malaria. Arkansas City, Ark. C. C. HERMINGWAY.

Boils, abscesses, sores, dark or yellow spots and debility are some of the symptoms of this miserable disease. S. S. S. counteracts and removes from the blood all impurities and poisons and builds up the entire system. It is guaranteed a purely vegetable remedy. Write for medical advice or any special information about case.

"LAYING UP" TREASURE.

William Weightman recently died in Philadelphia, leaving an enormous fortune, made mostly out of quinine. He was called the richest Pennsylvanian.

He was one of those men who recognize opportunity. He realized as early as 1862 that the Civil war, with its fever-infested camps, would make quinine a valuable commodity. He secured a practical monopoly of the chincolna bark supply, until then almost worthless, and from it extracted immense quantities of the medicine so indispensable from that time to this. He never lost his control of the quinine market as long as he lived. And he left fifty millions.

William Weightman was a typical representative of the eminently successful American "captain of industry." Millions of men are earnestly striving to meet the same kind of success.

At Worcester, Mass., another old man is ending another kind of successful career. George Frisbie Hoar is dying poor.

"All the income-producing property I have in the world, or ever had," says Senator Hoar, "yields a little less than $1800 a year. Eight hundred dollars of that is from a life estate, and the other $1000 comes from stock in a corporation which has paid dividends only for the last two or three years, and which I am very much afraid will pay no dividends or much smaller ones after two or three years to come. With that exception the house where I live, with its contents and with about four acres of land constitutes my whole worldly possessions, except two or three vacant lots, which would bring but very few dollars."

Compared with Weightman's fifty millions, this seems poverty. It seems little less than pathetic that a man of Senator Hoar's pre-eminent abilities should never have accumulated more than a few acres of land, a little house and a few shares of stock that a financier would turn up his nose at.

Weightman might have been deemed his own life a monumental failure had he been able to leave no more property than does Senator Hoar.

Senator Hoar's failure to get riches has not been due to extravagant living. He recently said:

"I have one extravagance. I have been in my day a most enthusiastic collector of books. There, I grant you, I have spent money, but not nearly as much money as I could get back for the books if I were to sell them now."

Senator Hoar leaves little? Nay, indeed, he leaves a legacy rich beyond that of fabled princes. He has given to the nation and to mankind the strength of a splendid mind, a strong body and an exalted spirit. To his own family he leaves an honored name and a noble example—the richest inheritance in the world.

Like a great tree that requires little ground for its own rootage, but stands as a far-seeing landmark for wayfarers and sheds grateful shade for the weary, the life of this great man, who has only a little home for himself, has been projected into the lives of the entire people of this land.

A Weightman, with his mind centered on quinine, might despise Hoar's estate, but what must such a man as Hoar, viewing life from his lofty height, think of a life devoted merely to the accumulation of money?

Women's Headaches. 542 1-2 Congress Street. PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902. I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pain would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities. Mrs. Wilhelmina Snow, Treasurer, Portland Economic League. Headaches are the danger signals of coming disease. Both men and women suffer headaches, but periodical headache falls only to the lot of women and is the unerring sign of irregular menstruation and bearing down pains. Completely prostrated by nine months of suppressed menses, blinded by headaches and racked with pain Mrs. Snow was made a strong and healthy woman again. Remember with Wine of Cardui no case is hopeless because this great remedy cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases and never fails to benefit a case of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, try Wine of Cardui, and try it now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. Secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui today. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui. WINE of GARDUI
