NO WOOD FAMINE

GREATER SUPPLY THAN EVER IN BLUE MOUNTAINS.

Wood in Pendleton is now selling at $6 and $6.50. When it was $6.50 and $7 last year—Over 2000 cords held up by Government inspectors at Meacham—Supply in Cascade Mountains Greater Than Ever—More Cut on Blue Mountains Also.

According to the wood dealers there will not be any danger whatever of a wood famine this winter, as a larger amount has been cut during the past summer than during any one summer for several years.

One reason why there is now on hand more than an average amount of cut wood is the fact of there having been a scarcity, with a correspondingly stiff price for wood, for several years in succession. This year, in anticipation of having a vigorous demand to meet, and in hopes that the general supply after all would be somewhat scant, everybody who could, worked up his wood for the winter trade, and the result is that there is a good wood supply in sight, and the price is less than last year, comparing the full quotations.

At this time the quotation is $6 for pine, and $6.50 for red fir and tamarack, compared with $6.50 and $7 a year ago.

Another factor in the discussion is that a little over a year ago 8099 cords of cut and piled wood for the winter market was burned in the Cascade mountains. This fall the equivalent of that amount, and still an increased output over that from the Cascades is in sight. In large lots wood can be bought in the Cascades still cheaper than the above figures. One thousand cords have been engaged by Pendleton dealers from the Cascades, of which a large amount has been delivered.

So free is the wood market in the mountain country tributary to Walla Walla, that it is said the dealers over there have laid in their winter supply two months earlier than usual.

Cut From Government Land.

It is said there is tied up by government land inspectors around Meacham 2000 cords of wood believed to have been cut from land not yet out of government ownership. A large number of men, relatively speaking, have filed on land in the mountains—200 acres each, of which 150 acres is grazing land and 40 acres timber land. The pre-emptors can get the grazing land on time, and yet use it for grazing purposes; but to acquire title enough to give them the right to cut wood on the remaining 40 acres, they must pay down in full for the land, which it is alleged many have not done. The marketing of the 2000 cords spoken of depends upon the outcome of the investigations into the alleged fraud. It is believed it will be released upon the settlement of each individual for the 40 acres of timber land by paying the cash for it, as was the original intention.

Larger Supply on Hand.

Outside of the 2000 cords mentioned, and the marketing of which is more or less problematical, it is said that there is in the immediate vicinity of Kamela one-third more wood than there was one year ago, and a still larger proportion around Meacham.

It does not appear that there is any scarcity of wood in the natural form, nor that there has been at any time, either last year or this. The difficulties of realizing a profit on wood under existing conditions have been the trouble all along, and they still exist. There are many discouragements for the wood fuel producer, and only the stimulus of supposed scarcity led to the comparative profusion of the output now in sight.

Each year it is farther between the felled tree and the point of market than ever before, and each year it is more and more difficult to get labor at a figure which the owners of the timber can afford to pay.

RAIN MAKES FLAX.

Fibre Will Not Separate Until Fermented by Moisture.

"The rains last week did an immense amount of good to our flax crop," said Mr. Eugene Bosse, proprietor of the flax plant here, to a Portland paper. "We didn't need the rain to make our flax grow, for it has all been harvested," he continued. "We want the rain to help get the straw. In that dry weather there were no dew, and the flax straw lay out on the ground without undergoing any perceptible change. The rain moistened it and set up a fermentation. We will have dew now nearly every night, and that will keep up the retting process."

"Fermentation dissolves the substance which holds the flax fibres together, and we cannot separate the fibre from the waste material until the fermentation is complete. Therefore, we are very glad to see the rain come."
