THEATREDOM Plays and Players and Their Realm

"The Old Lime Kiln."
Hark! What is that? A pistol shot! Crack! goes the voice of the deadly six-shooter, with an echo and re-echo reverberating among the hills, carrying the unwritten message of death and destruction. Perhaps a human life has departed from this earth—who knows? Or, maybe, greater still, a soul is saved by the killing of some savage beast. I hear a hello. Is it one of distress, or—Hello! Hello! Why, it's Jack—Jack Ridley, the Montana cattle king.

"Yes, little one, it's me. Right side up! I popped him that time, first crack, right through the heart. Good thing I did, too. I've roamed the law son. Norton's son, a captain in the United States army, falls in love with this wild flower. She in turn will consent to no union until her father's name is cleared of all stain. Together they undertake to solve the mystery, bringing to light the criminal actions of John Norton, the father of the captain. Through the persuasion and actions of friends, Norton is forgiven, and the wronged son is taken once more into his father's home.

The play is full of sensational climaxes and charming comedy situations.

The "Old Lime Kiln" will be the second play Wiedeman's big show will plains so many years that I've forgotten what little I used to know sparkin, and them critters do hug mighty hard, I tell you. A grizzly is worse than an old maid turned loose in the Klondike."

Thus I introduce the leading male character in the "Old Lime Kiln." The action of the drama takes place near Fort Assiniboine, Mont. John Morris, a mountain guide, and his beautiful daughter, "a wild flower of the West," live near the fort. A party of tourists visit their abode to secure services. Among the party is his father, accompanied by John Norton, who has taken the place in the father's heart of his supposedly out-offer at the Frazer Monday night, October 17. The first play will be the great Southern drama, "The Octoroon." Five vaudeville features will be presented each night, making an almost continuous show.

The company carries its own band and orchestra, giving a free band concert each day at 12 and 7:30 o'clock. Popular prices.

"Finnigan's Ball."
"Finnigan's Ball," which comes to the Frazer on October 22, has outlived all the other similar organizations which sprung up soon after the success of Barry and Fay 15 years ago. It is a shining example of the "survival of the fittest," for the manage-
