AUTOMOBILE BOULEVARD.

Deschutes Grade is About Ready for the Auto Line.

Archie Mason, who has the contract for building the automobile road from Shaniko to Bend, in Crook county, is in Portland, and says he has completed 70 of the 75 miles of road, and expects to construct another automobile road down the Deschutes river to a point on the Columbia above The Dalles before taking his outfit away from that country, says a Portland paper.

"The road I am just completing will be an easy one for automobiles," Mr. Mason said today, "as the steepest grade on the whole 75 miles is only 6 per cent. The roadbed is 12 feet wide, and the bridges across the gulches on the route are constructed of stout timbers. We are at present engaged in putting in several of these."

"The road to be built down the Deschutes toward The Dalles will probably be done by spring, as very little loss of time is anticipated on account of bad weather. We have bright, balmy days nearly all the time in that portion of Eastern Oregon, and the ground never freezes deep enough to prevent as plowing and scraping."

"The Deschutes Irrigation Company, for whom I am building the road, is busy at this time constructing a number of canals, primary ditches and laterals, and by next summer a large body of land heretofore known as "desert" will be growing alfalfa and timothy by the wholesale. Irrigation is doing a great deal for that region and a large population will soon result from so much new land being rendered productive."

INDIAN BOYS SUCCESSFUL.

Cheyenne Youths Have Become Cattle Raisers of Some Prestige.

An experiment of much value was attempted among the Cheyenne Indians in Oklahoma. An Indian agent wished the boys to milk cows for him and agreed to give each one who milked for three months a nice calf.

Fifteen boys started, but they were so ridiculed by the older men of the tribe that 12 of them gave it up. But three won the calves, and the pride of being owners of cattle served as quite an assistance in getting other Indian children to try.

After a year 12 had won calves, and the agent asked them to plow corn for him, agreeing to give them all the corn they could raise. Ten boys volunteered to grow corn, and they actually raised 3000 bushels, which was sold and afterward converted into 35 head of steers. Each steer was branded with an individual brand chosen by the boy owner. This made them prouder than ever, and more industrious.

Every boy at the agency wanted to go to work at once, and as a result of that experiment the Cheyennes are the most industrious farmers of any tribe so recently on the warpath.

CAN'T ATTEND CHURCH.

Judge Brents of Walla Walla, Decides Old Church Case.

The superior court yesterday entered a decree sustaining the plaintiffs in the long-standing suit of the Free Evangelical Lutheran Congregational church of Zion vs. Jacob Herget, John Fries, Philip Fries, Jacob Nutz and Conrad Rieal, says the Walla Walla Union.

This decision settles at least the legal part of a dispute which has rent in twain the congregation of the little church which stands on lot 10, block 1, of Barron's addition to Walla Walla.

On August 27, 1902, the defendants, being legally elected members of the church, voluntarily withdrew. Evidence which seemed conclusive to the court was introduced showing that Messrs. Herget, Fries, et al. have trespassed upon the property and have threatened to interfere with the services of the church.

Judge Brents decided that the church property belonged to the present trustees and enjoined the defendants from entering the church for the purpose of controlling in any manner the deliberations of the congregation. The costs of the suit were also taxed against the withdrawing members.
