Old British Drinks.

Mead, made of honey, water and spices; braggot, wort and pigment, variants, were very early drinks in England.

Currant wine, elderberry, gooseberry, mulberry, quince, plum and apricot wine are old fashioned varieties. Parsnips and turnips produce a very powerful village brandy.

Cowslip and rhubarb wine are very different, the former weak and the latter very heady.

Fir tree tops, green nettle tops, birch and beech sap, bog myrtle, heather—all produced liquors. And did not a New England rhyme, meant to encourage the patriotic boycott on British goods, run:

We can make liquor to sweeten our lips From pumpkins and parsnips and walnut tree chips!

Sloe gin and rus gin are queer drinks. Negus is sherry, hot water, lemon, sugar and nutmeg. The London Outlook says that Derbyshire women used to drink in secret a "ferociously intoxicating" potion made out of the poisonous foggielove.—New York World.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passage for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 54 Warren street, N. Y.
