REASON IT WAS DONE

KUROPATKIN WAS HELD MOSTLY RESPONSIBLE.

The Worst Knocker Was a Civilian of High Standing, Who Used Every Effort to Discredit Him with the Czar—The Fall of Mukden Was All That Was Needed to Force Kuropatkin's Recall, and it Followed Promptly.

London, April 10.—A Russian correspondent sends a curious story concerning the dismissal of General Kuropatkin, and vouches for its authenticity. He says it is not surprising that the recall of General Kuropatkin has excited little comment in St. Petersburg. Everybody expected it after the fall of Mukden. The reason is as follows: About six weeks ago M. Demehinski, a Russian of high standing and a great personal favorite of the czar, wrote a long memorandum from Manchuria, addressed, through M. Souvorin, the editor of the Novoe Vremya, to the Russian press and people.

In this memorandum M. Deschinski charged General Kuropatkin with many offences, and accused him of being entirely responsible for the disasters to the Russian arms. A detailed account was given of the condition of affairs in Manchuria, and opinion was expressed that if General Kuropatkin was allowed to continue in the position of commander in chief Russia would never win a victory. The most popular person in the Far East, continued M. Deschinski, was "papasha" ("Dear little father") Linevitch, and he was also the only military man with sufficient skill to retrieve the Russian fortunes.

This communication created a great sensation in St. Petersburg, and copies of it were circulated all over Russia after the editor of the Novoe Vremya had first forwarded it to the czar. The latter had also received another communication from the front to the effect that Kuropatkin's plans were to make a grand stand at Mukden, and that he had taken an oath on his sword not to move an inch from that place. The czar decided to let Kuropatkin stand or fall by the oath he had taken. So when the news of the loss of Mukden was received he without any delay summoned the grand dukes by telephone to an extraordinary council, drew their attention to M. Deschinski's charges and announced Kuropatkin's dismissal.

REPRESENT 2,000,000 WOMEN.

International Council in Session at Washington.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—About 100 delegates, representing 200 societies with an aggregate membership of 2,000,000 women, filled Pythian hall today at the opening of the triennial convention of the International Council of Women. The diversity of the interests of the organization was illustrated by the fact that among those present were representatives of the Women's Catholic Society of America, the Women's Free Baptist society, several benevolent societies, to some of which Mormons belong; the Colored Women's association and various literary bodies.

The initial session, which was devoted largely to routine business, was presided over by Mrs. Mary Wood Swift of San Francisco, president of the council, and Mrs. F. Miller of Wilmington, Ill., acted as secretary.

After a thorough discussion, that will continue throughout the week, resolutions upon which all the elements can agree will be adopted. At several of the sessions there will be addresses by notable speakers, among them Edwin Markham, J. E. McKelway, the Rev. Anna Shaw, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis.

THE TENNESSEE TRAVELERS.

Their State Organization in Flourishing State.

Nashville, Tenn., April 10.—There was a large and representative attendance today at the opening of the annual convention of the Tennessee division of the Travelers' Protective association.

The gathering was called to order at 10 o'clock and opened with prayer by the state chaplain, Rev. J. C. Cowan. Mayor A. S. Williams extended a cordial greeting to the visitors and the response was embodied in the annual address of the state president, J. C. Sterchi of Knoxville. The remainder of the day was taken up with matters of business.

The reports presented show the affairs of the order to be in a satisfactory condition and the membership to be increasing at a gratifying rate. This evening the visitors were entertained at Glendale park.

Grand Lodge B'nai B'rith.
