

The Latest Yet

SOUVENIR LETTER ALBUMS OF OREGON.

This is, without doubt, the latest invention in the way of a photograph souvenir and promises to become very popular. The construction is similar to an envelope, when closed being about the size of an ordinary number six government envelope. Made with two sheets of letter paper and four sheets of views making in all eight different views in each booklet, and made in four different series or a total of 32 different views in the lot.

After writing the letter you simply moisten the gummed edges and seal it exactly the same as an envelope. Address and stamp the outside cover. The receiver merely tears off the gummed edges at the perforation, which is readily done, whereupon he finds his letter with the different views of the most popular and interesting scenes in this state.

Galvani Pleads for Vegetarianism

Never has better work been done in Portland than now by the Women of the School of Domestic Science who are cleaning up the city's markets, says W. H. Galvani, in the Sunday Oregonian. The community certainly owes them a debt of gratitude for their timely investigation of the butcher shops and fish and poultry markets, where the mangled remains of inoffensive animals are sold to gratify the refined tastes of spiritual man.

They have made a most excellent beginning, and, judging from what they have already accomplished, it is safe to assume that they will carry out a most interesting program. By this, of course, I mean that they will give full publicity to this matter, so that people may know the nature of the stuff they daily consume, and the actual conditions under which such stuff is obtained.

To me this is especially gratifying, since this excellent work of our representative women speaks most eloquently for the adoption of a bloodless diet, or a vegetarian diet, if you prefer to call it so. Between the flesh-pots and the plant world there is no middle ground, and each must take his choice.

And the more this subject is brought to the attention of thinking people the greater will be the number of those who will avail themselves of a purely vegetarian diet. Such a diet is not only in accord with a just recognition of the rights of animals, but is purer, more wholesome, affords a most excellent variety, and is free from the disgusting objections which form so inseparable a feature of animal foods.

The world is not at all ready to accept the ipse dixit of some scientists, who find it proper or profitable to proclaim that we can subsist upon tubercular or otherwise diseased animal matter without any danger to our health.

I am fully aware of the popular error which finds support even among some leading physicians, that a diet made up of vegetables, fruits and grains, with or without the addition of eggs and milk, is insufficient for a perfect and prolonged maintenance of health. Facts are, however, against every error, as they always have been against every error and superstition, though some refuse to admit it.

Indeed, according to the best authorities on the subject, a vegetarian diet, under a sensible management, is not only best adapted to meet all the requirements, but also represents advantages which even the champions of a carnivorous system cannot claim for their most favorite morsels. And, by the way, some of the most eminent physicians in this city admitted to me within the last few years the great advantages of a vegetarian diet, both in health and in disease. Therefore, in common with any vegetarian, I rejoice at what is just now being done through the efforts of the School of Domestic Science.

To me there is an assurance in such work that the race will some day redeem itself from the barbarism of the slaughter house, an unmistakable prophecy that the future may bring a reappearance of "a vigorous race of undiseased mankind," as in the days of early nature, the age which men called Golden. And this, instead of adhering to the doctrine, "Arise, and slay, and eat," humankind will once more, turn to the plant world, the original source whence all food is supplied us.

In the same time it will thus redeem itself from the civilized savagery of feasting upon the flesh and blood of victimized, tortured and mangled fellow creatures, who, as far as all audible and visible evidence points, have sprung from the same source with the paragon of animals, and as such must share the same destiny.

For almost one-half of my life I have subsisted upon a vegetarian diet, and I am firmly convinced of the great advantage such a diet affords. But above all, I rejoice in the realization of the fact that the maintenance of my life does not require a daily sacrifice of the lives of any living creature. Would that all others might see this matter in the same light.

Discouraging a Hen.

The propensity of some hens to sit, in season or out, on eggs, stones, door knobs or anything that comes handy, is one of the most grievous afflictions of the poultry keeper. In his interest is reprinted the description of a "sure cure" discovered by a correspondent of the Chicago Chronicle in Lesueur, Minn. The cure consists of a cheap watch that ticks loudly and clearly, and is enclosed in a white, egg-shaped case. When a hen manifests a desire to sit at the wrong time, the poultryman gently places under her this bogus egg, and the egg does the rest. Cheerfully it ticks away. The hen soon begins to show signs of uneasiness. She sits the noisy egg with her bill, thinking perhaps that it is already time for it to hatch, and the chicken in it wants to get out. She grows more and more nervous as the noise keeps on, and finally she jumps off the nest and runs around a while to get cool. Generally she returns to her self-imposed duty; but things get worse and worse with her. She wriggles about and cackles, ruffles her feathers and looks wild, until at last with a frenzied squawk, she abandons the nest for good and all. The fever of incubation is broken up completely. The Lesueur poultryman declares that he has never found a hen that could stand the strain of the conversational egg for more than three hours. In much less time that that, as a rule, the hen is ready to return to her legitimate business.

M. Nesliff has just sold his farm in Washington for $5000 and a neighbor, J. Jackson, sold his for $8000. They will return to Finland. A few years ago they were penniless emigrants.

BOGS "GREEN CARNATIONS."

Enterprising Florists Impose on Burbank's Friends.

The Examiner several days ago mentioned the frauds that were being committed on the public and the injustices being done Lather Burbank by unscrupulous florists and others, in selling plants and flowers which they claim are Burbank creations, and which in reality he has never seen, says the San Francisco Examiner. Letters are beginning to arrive from persons who purchased green carnations in San Francisco and other cities because they were told they were Burbank creations. It has been learned that the enterprising florist who offered them for sale produced the color by the aid of a chemical.

Mr. Burbank intends to work again to produce a carnation which will bloom in white, pink and deep red on alternate days. Some precious carnations, performing this wonderful change of colors were destroyed last year by gophers. Mr. Burbank knows how to proceed to reproduce the beautiful blooms again.

There is a large attendance of state medical examiners, representatives of medical colleges and others.

Advance in Values.

Mr. Grandy sold six and one-half acres of land this week to a Mr. Hurr of Kansas for $2750. About three years ago the same property sold for $600, and later for $1500. Thus does Freewater real estate increase in value by leaps and bounds.—Freewater Times.

WORMS

"I had for years suffered from what medical men called Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the stomach. In August I purchased a box of Cascarets and was surprised to find that I had 'em'—yes—a wiggle-squirring mass left me. Judge our doctor's surprise when I showed him thirty feet, and in another day the remainder about the same length of a tape-worm that had been sapping my vitality for years. I have enjoyed the best of health ever since. I trust this testimonial will appeal to all sufferers."—Chas. Blackstock, 1215 Divinity Place, West Philadelphia, Pa.
