OIL BANISHES DUST

SALT LAKE AND LOS ANGELES LINE TO BE SPRINKLED

Dust Across the Desert Makes Traveling Unpleasant and Efforts Will Be Made to Check It—Work of Completing the New Line Will Be Rushed as Rapidly as Possible.

Salt Lake, May 20.—Oil by the trainload is likely to be used along the line of the Salt Lake route to protect travelers from the dust. The proposition is receiving favorable consideration at the hands of the managers of the road and while they are not prepared to say that the scheme will be adopted they are convinced that it is a good thing and it may be put in operation even during the present year.

The plan is to use oil from the wells in California to scatter along the track through the desert and in this way permanently settle the dust. The plan has been found to work well on a number of the roads in California, and it is believed it will work equally well along the Salt Lake route.

West from the Meadow valley wash there is a long stretch of desert and in the hottest part of the year it is feared that the dust along this stretch of track might direct the oil in used to keep the air clean. After the ground is thoroughly saturated with the oil all that is necessary is to sprinkle once or twice a year to keep the track practically free from dust. After the first treatment of the ground oil sprinkling is not a heavy expense.

The work of ballasting the old part of the road this side of Nevada is being pushed with all possible vigor. A great body of gravel has just been opened at Black Rock in Millard county, and a large force of men is at work putting gravel on the roadbed between Lynn Junction and Nevada, a stretch of 160 miles. No time is to be lost in getting this piece of road ballasted, as it is well understood that the best time between Salt Lake and Los Angeles cannot be made until the old portion of the road is brought to the same standard as the new part. Seventeen miles of new heavy steel rails are also going in on this same section of the line.

There is a tremendous amount of work going forward along the line in the way of building up division points, stations, water tanks and other necessities of a great railroad system. The intention is to make the Salt Lake route the entire distance from one terminal to the other the best roadbed in the country. It is that in many respects, but it is to be improved in many ways before the management will be satisfied. Those in a position to speak with authority say that the San Pedro will be by far the fastest road in the west.

HUMAN JEALOUSY.

The Difference Between the Passion in a Man and a Woman.

The man's jealousy is a stormy sea flooding everything, tearing down and devouring everything in his path that is strong, filling his innermost heart, absorbing all rivers of feeling and destroying his mind. The woman's jealousy is a narrow, turbulent, treacherous torrent which hides its depth and high above which rise hard and silent banks; it heightens her sensibility and strengthens her mind.

The jealous man is a wrathful lion; he is noble, and hunger only forces him to tear his prey to pieces. The jealous woman is an infuriated snake; she is vain, and passion only tempts her to sting. The anger of the jealous man is directed against the object of his love and interrupts his love, and that of the jealous woman is directed against her rivals, and her love is intensified by it. Jealousy makes a fool of a man; it makes him ridiculous and lowers him in the love and esteem of the woman, but a woman gains in wit and charm by her jealousy, and it makes her more attractive to the man. Jealousy is a terrible, sharp weapon which a woman uses lightly in order to cut a few sweets on which to feed her vanity; often she even wounds with it the man she loves in order to enjoy his sufferings. The man disdains this cruel thing, though, did he use it, it would rarely miss its object of awakening the dormant love of a woman, of bringing hidden love to the surface and of creating love where there was none.—From "The German of Borne."

PYGMY HIPPO AND ELAND.

Two Animals of Africa That Are Practically Unknown.

There are two animals practically unknown to the outside world. These are the pygmy or Librarian hippopotamus and the Derbian eland. The first named is just what its name implies, a pygmy hippopotamus, differing from the larger and common variety in three respects only. In the first place, it is much smaller than the common Hippopotamus amphibius, being no larger than an ordinary fair sized hog; in the second place, it differs somewhat from the common hippo in the character of its teeth, and, in the third place, instead of spending its time in the rivers and lakes in large herds it wanders about through the jungles singly or in pairs, much after the manner of swine in search of mast. Owing to the fact that it does not go in herds and is hard to distinguish against the dark background of jungle thickets it is an exceedingly difficult animal to hunt or find. If anything the legs of the dwarf Librarian hippopotamus are a trifle longer in proportion than are those of the common river hippopotamus.

Next to the Librarian hippopotamus the Derbian eland of west Africa, which the Mandingoes call "Jinke jank," is today the least known of all rare and strange animals.—Owing.

The Printer's Devil.

Aldus Manutius, a printer in Venice to the holy church and the dogs, employed a negro boy to help him in his office. The boy was believed to be an imp of Satan and went by the name of the "printer's devil." In order to protect him from persecution and confute a foolish superstition Manutius made a public exhibition of the boy and announced that any one who doubted him to be a devil and blood might come forward and pinch him to make sure. The mistaken impression was removed, but before this time the name "printer's devil" had been attached to the boy and was thenceforth applied generally to the boyish assistants in a printing office.

Ruler of Russia's Title.

The general allusion to the ruler of Russia as the czar is, strictly speaking, incorrect. His official title is "emperor and autocrat." Czar is the old Russian word for lord or prince and was abandoned by Peter the Great on his triumphal return from Poltava, his crowning victory over Charles XII. of Sweden. Since then the Russian monarch has been officially entitled emperor, and at the congress of Vienna in 1815 his right to the imperial term was admitted by the powers, with the proviso that, though he was emperor, he had no precedence over the kings of western Europe.—St. James' Gazette.

The Lawyer's Habit.

The legal formality of addressing a court sticks to many a lawyer of congressional preference. It is nothing unusual to hear an impassioned orator in the house, pausing in his argument or breaking in upon the argument of another, exclaim, "Now, if your honor please!" Of course the house always marks the slip with a burst of loud laughter. In the senate, where there are also many lawyers, it is rarer to hear the familiar words because debate there is more sedate.

Strong Language.

"Popple's looking bad. What's the matter with him?"
"Lungs."
"You don't say! Weak, eh?"
"No; strong. There's a new baby at his house that keeps him awake nights."—Philadelphia Press.

Well Provided.

"Whew! Barnstormer must have found food for thought in the dramatic editor's article this morning."
"Food? I should say a full meal. He got a roast and also his desserts."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Poor, but Candid.

"Are you looking for work?"
"No," answered the poor but candid man: "I'm looking for money, but I'm willing to work, because I can't get it otherwise."—Exchange.
