FIRST CIRCUS OF SEASON.

Norris & Rowe's Greater Shows Exhibit Today and Tonight.

The first circus of the season was fittingly ushered in by a big street parade this morning by the Norris & Rowe greater circus. As the season is early, the equipment of the show has had no chance to show the wear and tear of the road, so everything is new, big and bright.

The splendid street demonstration, showed how greatly this favorite attraction has grown since last year. This afternoon a large crowd has assembled under the white tents to enjoy circus day to the fullest extent.

The sensational bare-back riding acts added to the show since last season adds greatly to the attractiveness of the program, especially the expert horsemanship of Rose Dockrill, the somersaulting on horse-back of Geo. Holland, the two-horse-carrying act of Frank and Dolly Miller, the hurricane jockey and hurdle riding of Austin King and the equestrian feats of Herbert Rumley, Estelle Settler and Mlle. Julienne.

The mid-air and acrobatic feats of the six marvelous Belford troupe, Melotte, LaNole and Melotte on the elevated silver wire, the aerial Weavers, the Sibson sisters on the flying trapeze, the flying Barnards, the McDonald trio of daring bicyclists, the Gardner troupe in a mid-air casting act, the Sugimoto Japanese lady acrobats, swordswomen and fencers and many other acts of this nature prove a veritable feast of circus novelties.

The hippodrome races are thrilling and exciting. A score of clowns headed by the famous "Happy Billy" La Rue, "Bill Scott" and his trained pig, "Cheerful Tote" Ducerow and the grotesque Olipans.

The really excellent menagerie containing lions, tigers, hyenas, llamas, camels and dromedaries came in for a goodly share of attention, as did also the trained animal acts of the trio of elephants, Siberian bears and bloodhounds in a act, Arabian cake-walking stallions, high-jumping horses and many strange animals broken to harness. There will be another performance tonight.

Osteopathy

Fevers—Continued. Germs constitute the chief and sole cause of fevers, in the minds of the general public, and even with some poorly read doctors. Something to kill the germs is the public cry, and these poorly read physicians often ostensibly give something for the purpose. Yet it is known full well that any drug used internally that will kill germs will also destroy the cells of the body and even life itself.

True, germs are a cause of fever, but are secondary. Germs cannot propagate or even live except the resistance of the tissue be weakened. This weakening, then, is the first cause and the one to be attended to. Nature, in the white blood cells, has provided ample protection against germs. These cells, under the microscope, may be seen containing many germs which they have encased and killed.

What then is the logical treatment? First, the Osteopath corrects the displacements that weaken the blood flow through the part where the germs have located and multiplied. Then he tries the blood making organs that this army of white blood cells may be increased. In this way are the germs killed and the fevers aborted.
