PORTLAND COMMUNE WILL FAIL.

The Co-operative Christian Federation just launched in Portland will go the way of its hundreds of predecessors, into disorganization and failure.

The East Oregonian believes in improving social conditions and making better laws and formulas for men to live under, but it does not believe that the little narrow communistic plan is the means by which to accomplish this great end.

It has every confidence in the men at the head of the new organization, but it has no confidence whatever in their plans. If they would exert the same influence to bring about government ownership of railways, municipal ownership of street railways, electric light and telephone systems and water works, as they will in forming and conducting this little co-operative community, in which a limited number of people will receive the benefits, much greater general good would be accomplished.

These co-operative concerns are not new. Hundreds of them, started under the most auspicious conditions, have gone down the toboggan slide into disruption and many of them ending in disgrace.

Among the oldest and most successful are the Shakers and they are religious zealots. They were first organized in New York in 1776, and today have but 17 societies in nine states. Business does not enter into their plans. Worship and contentment are their sole objects and so it requires little to satisfy them. Such would not be the case in the Portland concern.

The Amans society is another old one, organized with the highest ideals but now dwindled down to a handful of enthusiasts. Harmony Society, organized in 1895 is nothing but a name. The Oneida Community, founded on the broadest Christian brotherhood, and established with large capital, is only a memory.

The Separatists of Zoar, another religious colony, is forgotten except in history. The Icarian society, which was extremely hopeful at first, succumbed to human selfishness and died.

The Woman's Commonwealth, founded with the most exalted purposes at Belton, Texas in 1870, expired after lingering and pitiable existence, although it deserved a better fate.

Of all the modern socialist colonies that deserve a place in sociological history is the Ruskin colony, which was founded on a business basis and with seemingly the best possible surroundings, but it is only a name and not a pleasant one at that, for selfishness and greed crept into its councils and it consequently withered.

The Christian Commonwealth is another such organization which had a spasmodic career and died. The Brotherhood of the Co-operative Commonwealth, another one starting under auspicious circumstances was most favorably received but the same old human selfishness came in to wreck it.

The Colorado Co-operative company, an irrigation concern, did not succeed, although it had a good foundation and exalted ideals. The Straight Edge People, another socialist community, failed because of lack of earnestness and self-sacrifice of its members.

Others of the same ilk that have been founded and as quickly died, are the Co-operative Association of America, the National Production company, the Co-operative Industrial colony, the Commonwealth of Israel, the Home Employment company, the Altruist Commonwealth of St. Louis, the Association of Altruists, the Lord's Farm, the Mutual Home Association, the Freedom Colony, Willard's Co-operative company, (and one well remembered by many Westerners), Topobamco, Prairie Home, the Union Mills company, and a colony close to home, the Nehalem Valley Co-operative company, formed at Mist, Columbia county, Oregon, which failed because of lack of practicability it is said, although it was started under auspicious conditions.

The Co-operative Christian Federation of Portland is perhaps larger than any of its predecessors, and therefore its failure will involve more disaster and spread wider havoc, but it is doomed to fail just as surely as the smaller concern.

The only way in which to secure good government, better conditions and happy surroundings for the people is through government ownership by which the blessings may be extended to all the people. In anything short of this, selfishness is the ruling passion.

PROGRESS IN NOME.

Nome being in a commercial sense a friend and neighbor of Seattle, it is pleasant to read this account of it in the Nome Nugget, whose special edition of June 10 has much literary and typographical merit, says the Seattle News. It abounds in red ink, and clearly has an able staff in all departments. It says:

"Nome is the metropolis of the Seward peninsula, and is likewise the most important city in the whole of Alaska. It is situated on tide water on Bering sea, and is the distributing point for practically the entire peninsula and the country contiguous thereto. It has a summer population of between 6000 and 8000, and a winter population of about 3000.

"Nome is an up-to-date city, peopled by an active, aggressive and intelligent class of citizens. It enjoys modern conveniences, such as telegraphic communication with the outside; railroad facilities to the most important creeks; telephone lines, both long distance and short; an electric light plant and water works. There are splendid churches of different denominations; a fine public school system; a chamber of commerce; practically every essential business is well represented, and there are many lodge organizations. In fact, nearly every essential element for the convenience and comfort of civilized people is here to be found."

CHILD SLAVERY IN CHICAGO.

A system of virtual child slavery, in which children under 14 years of age are "farmed out" into Chicago households in an attempt to solve the "servant girl problem," is a state of affairs that has been brought to the attention of the department of compulsory education, following startling revelations in various justice courts of Chicago in the last three weeks. That such a system exists to an alarming degree is the declaration of Superintendent W. L. Bodine, who has secured the conviction of Mrs. Ottilie Krosnick in Justice Prindeville's court on the charge of violating the compulsory education law.

This is the 10th case of its kind that I have had in the last three weeks," said Mr. Bodine. "Judging from the testimony of various witnesses at the trials of these cases, I am convinced there are hundreds of children from institutions who are drugging as servants in many households of the city without being sent to school."

Mrs. Krosnick was fined $20 and costs—the limit in such cases. The two children under her charge were Adelaide Walby, 13 years old, and Edward Rinder, 10 years old. The woman said she had taken the girl from an orphan asylum in the city eight years ago. This child was found hard at work over a washtub, and it was testified at the trial that she had been ill-treated and compelled to work at the hardest kind of labor an average of 12 hours a day. She could hardly read or write.

The boy was taken from the home for the friendless when he was 3 years old, and the testimony showed that he had been kept at work instead of being sent to school.

Warrants have been secured for several persons, many of whom are said to have taken children from institutions and forced them to do work far beyond their strength.

Guy G. Essig, a young Spokane druggist, was found dead in a field near his father's home, near Plattsburg, Mo., with a gunshot wound in his body. He was visiting in Missouri. Complete mystery envelops the affair.

THE DESERT.

Here is the ancient kingdom of the sun. This barren, lowly waste of desert land.

Which for his own long years ago he won. And fierce guards with flaming sword in hand, Whose lightning search the plain remorselessly, Till all therein is tuned to flame's bright key.

His floods of light effulgently unfold The plain with airy scarves of amethyst; The ruddy earth and sands of tawny gold Loom out like bands of flame through lilac mist; Bright islands in the all-pervading flood, The splintered porphyry rocks gleam red as blood.

The rainbow-balooed amber moon at night Creeps in the upper desert shyly past; The stars, like myriad points of orange light, Peep through the purpose shadow dim and vast; And night and voiceless silence sit and brood, Twin regents of the unbroken solitude.

Around this hermit kingdom thickly set The patient hills in bony ridges stand, With here and there a sentinel minaret, Its feet deep planted in the burning sand. Upon whose head, to whet his subjects' fears, The braggart monarch rains his shining spears. —Mildred F. Hudson in The Talisman.

BOILER ROLLED DOWN HILLSIDE

A big boiler, designed for the dredge near Placerville, after being carefully pulled up Lemp's hill near Shafer creek Thursday by a 10-horse team, broke loose near the summit and crashed down the hillside through the trees and underbrush for a distance of 100 yards, says the Bolise Statesman. The boiler weighs 14,000 pounds and it is expected it will prove a stupendous task to get it back to the top of the hill and safely on the road to Placerville. Just how the accident occurred is something of a mystery. The outfit was in charge of Thomas Stevens, an experienced freighter, with an assistant, he having contracted to haul the machinery from the railroad to the scene where it was to be put to use. The hill is a bad one, and the men had toiled long and hard to get the two wagons, upon which the boiler was loaded, it being too large for a single wagon, to the top.

Just before it reached a point of safety, however, the wagons upset, and the huge boiler went crashing to the bottom of the ravine below, dragging the wagons with it.

July 4 in Alaska.

Reports from Alaska indicate that many of the towns are to have big celebrations on the Fourth of July. Juneau is planning to have a two-day program of drilling contests, foot races and other interesting events. Seward and Nome are also preparing to observe the national holiday in proper style.

OSTEOPATHY.

AFTER EFFECTS OF COLDS.

How has this winter's cold left you? Have you some lingering ailment dating from a hard cold or a gripe of the past winter? Has your doctor explained to you minutely how this comes about? Has he told you how stomach and bowel troubles, heart disease, lung, kidney, liver disorders, catarrh, deafness or eye trouble comes from colds? All accept the truth that throat and lung troubles may come from colds, in fact, always date it from a cold. But how many have gone deep enough to tell why it persists? Do so, and you will just as readily see how all the other ills mentioned may come from the same source. Briefly, here is the explanation:

The cold contracts the muscles along the spine and between the ribs. These contractions may pinch the nerves to the organs or they may draw the bones from position and the bones pinch the nerves. No organ acts without nerve supply, hence the disease. Call on Dr. Holington and have these contractions shown you. Contractures and displacements are not mysteries, you can recognize them.
