POSTMASTER IS BADLY NEEDED

MOST NORTHERN OFFICE IN THE WORLD IS VACANT.

Department Is in Search of a Man for the Point Barrow Office, 800 Miles North of Nome, Where But Three Mails Arrive Each Year and the Salary Amounts to $1.65 Per Annum—Few Applicants for the Position as Yet.

Wanted—By the United States Post-office Department, a reliable and trustworthy man to take charge of the office at Point Barrow, Alaska. Expected to give good and sufficient indemnity bond, satisfy the government as to his character, reside at Point Barrow the year round and prove his ability to handle three mails a year. Salary about $1.65 per annum. Apply to John P. Clum, Hotel Washington, Seattle.

Richmond Marsh, postmaster in charge of the office at Point Barrow, Alaska, the northernmost post office in the world, has tendered his resignation to the post office department, and the department is in search of a man to fill the place.

The duties of the position are by no means arduous, though some of the qualifications exacted of the successful applicant may prove a little trying. He is expected to be able to handle at least three mails each year, two of which will reach him during the winter months and one some time in July, soon after the opening of the Arctic ocean to navigation. Between the arrivals of mails he will be permitted by the department to take a much needed vacation, says the Seattle News.

Point Barrow is some 800 miles northeast of Nome. The place consists of a native settlement and a Presbyterian mission, the latter having been for several years in charge of Mr. Marsh, the late postmaster. Last year Mr. Marsh was ordered from Point Barrow to Hoonah and when he departed for his new station he left the office in charge of an assistant. He is desirous of being relieved of the work on account of the manifest inconvenience of residing in one town and conducting a postoffice in another one some 1500 miles distant. The department has promised to relieve him of the office as soon as it is able to find a suitable and trustworthy man to take his place. The search for such a man is now being conducted by Postal Inspector Clum, of the district of Alaska, who arrived from the east this morning and is registered at the Hotel Washington, Seattle.

The most exacting requirement of the new postmaster is that he reside at Point Barrow. This the department will insist upon. The present postmaster has made a satisfactory official, but he is not a resident of the place, hence the necessity for a change.

The Point Barrow office receives three mails a year. One of these is carried on the revenue cutter Bear which visits the place each summer. At the missionary school there one of the exciting events of the year is a guessing contest among the pupils for a prize offered the one who guesses nearest to the date the Bear will arrive. Interest in this contest begins early in the autumn and increases in intensity all night, becoming very exciting by about July 1, when the natives begin to look for the cutter. She usually arrives some time between July 1 and August 31, and following her arrival comes one of the busy seasons for the postmaster. She sometimes brings as many as 25 letters in a bunch.

The other mails to Point Barrow are carried from Nome on reindeer sleds. As the distance is only some 800 miles it is a pleasant little jaunt for an Eskimo mail carrier to take during the early days of an Arctic evening. The winter mails, being two in number, are not as large as the one which is received in the summer, consequently involve less labor on the part of the postmaster.

The salary of the office is a little uncertain. He is paid according to the value of the stamps cancelled by the office. As he is about the only person in the settlement who has any reason to write letters, his income depends on the number of letters he writes. If he is very industrious he can increase his income, charging himself with the stamps he uses as an individual, then crediting himself with them when as postmaster he cancels them for transmission.

Mr. Clum does not know how large the salary was last year for the reason that the annual report of the office mailed January 1, 1905, had not been received at Washington when he left there 10 days ago. Unless it is unnecessarily delayed it should reach there about July 1. Mr. Clum thinks, however, judging from preceding reports, that the income will reach at least $1.65 for the year.

GROWS A NEW ROSE.

Mrs. Frances Billings of Seattle, Develops Flower.

By blending the American Beauty rose with the Japanese tea rose, Mrs. Frances Billings of Seattle has developed a new flower to which she has given the name of her daughter, Jessie Billings. A ceremonious christening of the new bloom took place Thursday at Mrs. Billings' residence, 125 Twenty-seventh avenue. Miss Billings poured wine over the plant and flower and pronounced the formal words of the christening.

Mrs. Billings has worked for months at the task which produced the new rose. She failed to accomplish the result by grafting, and then planted a seed of each variety close together in a small pot. When the plants sprouted, she budded the two and they grew together as one plant. The plant was six months old when it bloomed a few days ago. The numerous invited guests at the christening pronounced the flower one of great beauty.

STEVENS IS A STAYER.

Interesting Incident of the Panama Canal Engineer.

John F. Stevens, the new chief engineer for the Panama canal is undoubtedly an able engineer, but he has made mistakes. When the news of his appointment reached the city hall Friday, says the Seattle Star, Assistant City Engineer Jeffrey, who once worked for him, and others who made his acquaintance during his 14 years' operations on this coast recalled incidents in the career of the veteran engineer.

"It must have been 15 years ago," said inspector J. D. Corey, "that I was employed as a bookkeeper for the San Francisco Bridge company, now the Puget Sound Bridge & Dredging company of this city, of which Stevens was then the head. He made a bid for constructing a bridge for the Northern Pacific near Tacoma, but by an oversight he only figured on the cost of one-half of the structure.

"Don't give it away," he told me, and you bet he never squealed. He took the contract. He lost $2500 on the job, but he was too game to let anybody know he had made such a palpable mistake."

"Stevens is certainly a high-class engineer," said Mr. Jeffrey. "He laid out the Great Northern route across the Rocky mountains to Everett, which is considered a fine piece of work, the famous switchback in the Cascades, and the Cascade tunnel, which displaced it. You can bet on one thing—Stevens won't resign to accept a more lucrative position that may be offered him. He is a stayer and takes too much interest and pride in his work to leave a job for a higher salary."

HARRIMAN TO VISIT JAPAN.

Wall Street Sees Prospect of Union Pacific Steamboat Line.

New York, July 3.—E. H. Harriman is soon to make a long trip to the Orient, and while it has been given out that he is going to Asia for recreation, it is generally believed in Wall street, that important business matters will be undertaken by him during his stay in Japan.

Mr. Harriman believes that Japan, after the close of the present war, will enter upon a marvelous period of business and commercial development. As the trade with such a country will be of great importance to the trans-Pacific railroads it is thought that Mr. Harriman is going abroad with a view to forming some important traffic alliances.

A new trans-Pacific steamship company is suggested, as it is believed that Japan will become an important maritime nation, and will undoubtedly want to establish commercial steamship lines to all important countries of the world. An alliance between such a steamship company and the Union Pacific railroad, which is controlled by Mr. Harriman, is expected to be one of the results of this trip.

A BAD DISORDER

In the fall of 1895 I contracted that fearful disease, Blood Poison. It gained such headway that I was forced to resign my position and seek relief at Hot Springs. After spending all the means I had I went to Memphis. In less than three weeks I was in a hospital, and after nine weeks of suffering I was discharged as cured. In less than a month every bone in my body seemed to be affected and felt as if they would break at the least exertion. Again I was compelled to resign, and I returned to the hospital for a seven weeks stay. When I came out I was advised to try farming. When I first went on the farm I prevailed on the only farm who handled drugs to get me one dozen bottles of S. S. S. At that time both of my hands were broken out with blisters and I was covered with boils and sores. In the meantime my druggist had gotten two dozen bottles of S. S. S. for me and I began its use, and after taking the thirteenth bottle not a sore or boil was visible. R. B. POWELL, East 9th St., Little Rock, Ark.

Of all human diseases, Contagious Blood Poison is the most hideous and hateful. The victim is tortured with eating ulcers, sores and abscesses, unsightly blotches, eruptions and other symptoms of the miserable disease. S. S. S. has been used successfully for nearly fifty years for Contagious Blood Poison. It contains no mercury, potash or other mineral. Our home treatment book gives all the symptoms of this disease. Medical advice free.
