IGGOROTES FOR PORTLAND.

Fifty Bontoc Head-Hunters Now on Way to the Lewis and Clark Fair.

Portland, July 12.-By the first of August 50 Bontoc Igorotes will reach Portland, to build a village at the Lewis and Clark fair and remain as a living ethnological exhibit during the fair. For a time it seemed that Portland was not going to have this interesting feature, but after much hard work on the part of those interested in the enterprise the consent of Uncle Sam was secured and the Igorotes were collected and put aboard ship at Manila. It was necessary to obtain the consent of Secretary Taft and Governor Luke E. Wright of the Philippine islands, before the natives could be procured. The government gave its consent for the head-hunters to come to America only after receiving rigid assurance that they would be returned to their homes. At the Portland fair these people of limited apparel will do their peculiar dances, eat dog, smoke cigarettes and otherwise add to the gaiety of the exposition. Their village will be located near the Homer Davenport bird and animal farm. As this will be the first time any of these interesting wards of the nation have been on exhibition in the Pacific West, it is expected that they will attract much attention.

School Property for Sale.

For Sale. Inquire of John Haley. "The sign that greets the pedestrians who pass by any of the old school houses that have done service as class rooms for the last time. The school board desires to sell the lots and buildings and will do so as soon as they are wanted by any purchaser who has the required capital. The board is more anxious to sell the grounds and house on East Court street than any of the others. The double-minded are but half-witted.

BAIL FOR MARTIN

CERTIFICATE OF PROBABLE CAUSE WAS ISSUED.

State, Through Judge James A. Fee, Took Exception to This Action by the Supreme Court and the Matter Occupied the Attention of Circuit Judge Ellis During the Afternoon.

From all indications Grover Martin will not be required to go to the penitentiary pending the appeal of his case to the supreme court. Circuit Judge Ellis was asked this afternoon by C. H. Carter, to name a bail for the young man who has been convicted of manslaughter, and for the same sentenced to serve 10 years in the penitentiary. A certificate of probable cause has just been issued at the request of the attorneys for the defense by Chief Justice Wolvortson. However, when the above was presented this afternoon and bail requested the matter was excepted to by Judge Fee, who stated that he desired to telegraph to the chief justice regarding the case before going further. It was the contention of Judge Fee that it was not proper for a judge of the supreme court to issue a certificate of probable cause after such had been refused by a trial judge, as was done by Judge Ellis. According to his contention either a judge of the supreme court or the trial judge could be asked for the certificate at the start, but that after one had been asked and had denied the request, no further appeal can be made. While waiting for the reply from Judge Wolvortson, action in the matter was withheld by Judge Ellis. However, should no new developments appear, he will likely fix bail for Martin either this evening or tomorrow morning. There is no certain bail specified for such cases and the amount to be required is entirely optional with the court.

WALLA WALLA HEALTHFUL.

Death Rate But 18 Per Month in the County.

The report of the county health officer for the last three months has been compiled by the county auditor and forwarded to the state board of health, says the Walla Walla Union. It is safe to say that there is no other county in the state in which the death rate has been as low as in Walla Walla county, when taken upon a comparative basis of the population. The report shows that there were 16 deaths in April, 20 in May and 19 in June, making an average of a little over 18 per month. This is certainly a good showing for a county of 30,000 population. In the list of causes of the various deaths during the three months heart disease heads the list with 11. Pneumonia and tuberculosis come next with six each, and the other various causes follow with one to three each.

Birth Rate. The birth rate for the past three months strikes a greater average than the death rate for the same period. During the month of April there were 31 births, in May 25, and in June 19, making a total of 75 and an average of 25 per month.

KING-WORCESTER WEDDING.

Pendleton Couple Quietly Wed in Baker City on June 27.

The quiet marriage of Jerry King and Miss Effie Worcester occurred at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of June 27, 1905, in the St. Stephen's Episcopal church at Baker City. The wedding ceremony was performed by Dr. G. Taylor Griffith in the presence of a few relatives and friends of the young people.

J. J. Worcester, father of Miss Worcester, gave the bride away. Miss Worcester is well known in this city, having lived here the greater part of her life and Mr. King is the well known ball player of the Pendleton team. The wedding was kept a secret by the young people and even the most intimate friends were not aware of its existence until it leaked out when the records were examined. Mr. and Mrs. King will reside in this city.

FINED FOR FIGHTING.

Gus Hill Paid $5 for Assaulting Chas. A. Kidder.

Police Judge Fitz Gerald's time was occupied this morning in hearing the case of the State of Oregon vs. Gus Hill, accused of assault and battery on the person of Charles A. Kidder. Hill was fined $5 by the court. There has been much trouble between the two men and it culminated in a fracas with Kidder getting the worst of the affair. Kidder swore out a warrant for the arrest of Hill, and the latter was notified to come to the city for trial. In the examination it was seen that Hill was not wholly to blame and the fine was made light for that reason.

Will Assist Marshal Coffman.

Marshal Coffman has appointed Jeff Stephens as special deputy to assist in the day police work during the summer time or as long as considered necessary. The additional officer is made necessary by the presence of so many idle men in town, many of whom are not work-hunters, but crooks and tramps. Under the city ordinances the deputy policemen are appointed by the marshal and are approved by the council. At the meeting of the council tonight the appointment of Mr. Stephens will probably be affirmed.

Death of E. F. Lane.

The death occurred at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon of E. F. Lane, the well known resident of Nolin. Deceased has been afflicted for some time with facial erysipelas and has been in the hospital for about five days in the hope of seeking relief, but was unable to survive the dread disease. The funeral arrangements had not been made at the time of going to press.

SALTION FLOOD RISING.

Great Sea of Waves Lashing Buildings of Salt Works. Salton, July 12.-The Salton desert flood is rising this morning. The Indians fearing a great deluge, and having felt slight earthquake shocks, are leaving the work and taking to the mountains. The Liverpool Salt company's works are surrounded by a sea of waves, which are lashing buildings and may destroy them.

Why Men Die Fast.

Colonel Bent Murdock, who is a good liver himself, hasn't any sympathy with the high liver who goes to rack. So-called big men—statesmen, warriors, professional and business men—go all to pieces in an hour, he says. And the why and the wherefore? They know. We know. Everybody knows and yet nobody cares. The world says, let them die, there are plenty left. The man who stuffs like a pig, drinks like a fish and loafs like a hobo will collapse. The man who lives fast dies fast. No getting over that proposition. While the one who lives rationally, sanely, long and dies slowly and peacefully. Too many people are burning the candle at both ends. But then why preach, why prate, why refer to it? They are not mismed and there would be no place for them should they come back.—Kansas City Journal.

TIMBER ON THE LEVEES.

Mississippi Finds a New Source of Supply Coming Into Use

One of the investigations with which the bureau of forestry has been engaged recently is a study of the tree growth along the Mississippi river from Cairo, Ill., to New Orleans. Bordered the river is a strip of land about 15 miles wide on either side, which is subject to repeated overflows; consequently a large proportion of the area is unavailing for agriculture, notwithstanding the richness of the soil.

Following the channel at a distance of from one-eighth of a mile to two miles from low water line, levees have been erected to control the stream. Between the levees and the river there can be no question of cultivation because of the certainty of overflow, but the land easily serves to raise cottonwoods, since the trees do not object to the periodical high water. Behind the levees much of the land can be drained and cultivated. Other parts are too wet for field crops, and there a dense and valuable forest is found, composed of ash, oak, hickory, cypress, gum and cottonwood.

The opportunity which the bureau of forestry finds is this: On the narrow strip inside the levees cottonwood can be grown with almost no care and harvested when the trees are from 35 to 40 years old. This wood now has a recognized place in the market for the manufacture of boxes, for furniture backs, washboards, etc. One company alone uses 60,000,000 board feet a year for making washboards.

Behind the levees much of the land will undoubtedly be reclaimed for agriculture, but until that shall be done the opportunity to maintain a forest of valuable trees is too good to be lost. In this forest white ash is the most important species, both because it grows more rapidly than oak and some other woods and because it is in constant demand and can be used in small sizes. The ash has been pretty well cut out of this forest, even to trees as small as six inches in diameter. This is wasteful, and the bureau recommends the application of more conservative lumbering to these lands. This simply means that the mature trees of all species shall be logged carefully and that in taking them out the young, immature trees, especially those of ash and hickory, of which there is also a small quantity, shall be carefully preserved and left to grow until they reach merchantable size, or a diameter of about 20 inches. If this be done, the owners of the land can count on a second crop of valuable timber before the land may be required for farming.

Of course, under such a system of management the forest must be protected from fire. The practice now is to burn out the undergrowth periodically. That destroys all the small trees. Forest management and fires cannot exist together; but there appears to be no necessity for setting these fires, and since the ground is nearly always moist, there is little danger of their being started accidentally.

The whole question of the profitable management of these forest lands lies within the control of the owners. Instead of reaping one harvest, as they now do, it will be almost as easy to secure the successive crops, so long as the land remains unavailing for farming. When that time comes the forest must give way permanently.

THE AMERICAN GOAT. Only 1,150,000 of These Valuable Animals in the United States. We are sending abroad $25,000,000 every year for the purchase of goat skins, which, in the opinion of the government bureau of animal industry might just as well be produced in the United States. This remark does not relate to the Angora goat, which, though its fleece is so valuable, has a hide too thin to be of much use for leather. It is the common, every day goat that is considered—an animal which feeds chiefly upon brushwood and briars, and which is capable of getting along prosperously almost anywhere in this country, except in swampy districts. Weeds are an acceptable item of its diet. The department of agriculture estimates that there are in this country about 1,150,000 common goats. One hundred times as many might easily be raised, their skins supplying the place of those imported, which come chiefly from India. Most of the imported hides are utilized in the manufacture of shoes, though large quantities of them are made into gloves, and a good many are converted into morocco leather. Next to India, France sends us the greatest number of goat skins. Among the French mountaineers the raising of kids for their dainty hides is a leading industry, and great pains are taken to secure softness, delicacy of texture and freedom from blemish. So soon as the young animals are old enough to eat grass or other vegetation the skin declines in quality, growing coarser and harder; wherefore the kid is shut in a pen, preventing it from eating grass and at the same time securing the skin from accidental injury by scratches and bruises. When the kids have reached the age at which their hides are in the best condition for the glove's use, they are killed and the skins are sold to traveling agents who go through the rural districts buying them up. In all of our large cities are found many kids, few of which grow to maturity. What becomes of them? Butchers answer the question by saying they pass over their blocks as "lamb." Great numbers of full grown goats are bought by the packing houses and put up as canned mutton, which, notwithstanding the prejudice against William and Nanny as human provender, seems to be found fairly acceptable. HAY FEVER ABOLISHED. Medical Science Discovers a Cure for This Malady by Breathing Hyomeol. Among the important additions made to medical science in recent years, none is more notable than the positive announcement of a cure for hay fever. Exhaustive experiments with Hyomeol prove that this treatment will prevent the attacks of hay fever if used for two or three weeks before the annual appearance of the disease, and it may be relied upon, if used faithfully after the sneezing and other annoying symptoms have appeared, to relieve at once and afford a permanent cure. Stomach dosing cannot cure hay fever. A change of climate is the only treatment that gives any relief, and Hyomeol, which medicates the air you breathe, acts upon this principle, giving in your own home a climate as healthy as that of the White Mountains or other health resorts. The complete Hyomeol outfit costs but $1. extra bottles, 50 cents. Tallman & Co. have seen the good effects following the use of Hyomeol in so many cases of hay fever that they are willing to sell the treatment with the understanding that if it does not give satisfaction, the money will be refunded to you. The Lick observatory is now in great danger of being destroyed by forest fires raging in that vicinity.
