FINDS RICH MINE

REMARKABLE PAY STREAK IN ABANDONED HOLE.

Sumpter District Started by the Discovery in an Abandoned Hole on Bald Ore in an Abandoned Hole on Bald Mountain—Three Tons of Ore will be Packed out to Sumpter this Week.

The Blue Mountain American of Sumpter gives the following account of the discovery of a remarkably rich body of gold ore in an abandoned mine near Bald mountain.

One of the most remarkable strikes yet recorded in eastern Oregon is herewith announced in the uncovering this week of one of the richest, if not the very richest surface pay-shoots opened in this land of gold.

Remarkable not alone from the quartz, full ten inches wide, being shot and sprinkled with free gold and running into the thousands of dollars per ton but from the fact that as depth is attained in the "glory hole" the paystreak is widening, as when the representative of the American left there yesterday morning it had increased to almost a foot in width, and the highly interesting stories connected with its location and abandonment by the original locator and subsequent location and abandonment four times by people well known throughout the district.

The strike was made in what is known as the Nugget group, acquired this year by Dan Dunne, A. M. Bessler and Chas. Butler, three of the best known underground workers in the district and who are now lifted from wage earners to owners of a property that bids fair to place magnificent sums to their credit.

Fast as the phenomenally rich ore can be extracted it is sacked by two of them while the third is busily engaged in cutting a trail to the connecting wagon road just below the Bald mountain hoist and tomorrow some two or three tons of the rich stuff will be packed over and brought to the Sumpter smelter.

Speaking of its richness, Chas. F. Chatten, traveling correspondent of this paper, who has just returned from the scene of the great strike said: "It is undoubtedly the richest ore yet opened on the surface in the camp and from panings made right at the 'glory hole' it is safe to say that every ton taken from the paystreak will run far above $5,000 per ton and some of the ore will most certainly run above $50,000 per ton.

The group is situated about eight miles from Sumpter on the east slope of Bald mountain and was originally located in 1896 and abandoned; re-located the following year, abandoned again and remained idle till 1900; located and abandoned again and remained idle unnoticed till it was re-located and incorporated in the Combination Gold Mining company in 1902 under the name of the United Bullion group.

Internal dissension arose among the officials of that organization and not even the assessment work was performed and it was relocated by a well known mining man of Sumpter, who also abandoned it and this year it was relocated by the present owners who have found the treasure vault.

OREGON IN THE LEAD.

Three of Six Leading Marksmen at Rifle Shoot at Sea Girt are Oregonians.

The military rifle tournament now being held at Sea Girt, N. J., is showing the Oregon National Guard up in fine condition. The first day's shooting at targets brought out 657 riflemen, representing almost every state and every organization in the regular army, including the officers training schools at West Point and Annapolis.

The leading six competitors named in the dispatches include three Oregon National Guardsmen, a showing of which the state may well be proud. The six named given special mention are:

Sergeant Gilbert, Oregon; Dr. Houck of Roseburg, Oregon; Lieutenant Bowen of Iowa, 46 each. Sergeant Hird, Iowa; Captain Lee, California, 45 each. Corporal U. S. Rider, of Salem, Oregon, and Sergeant Agostini, Hawaii, 44 each.

Each competitor fires 10 shots each at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, slow fire, and a similar number at 200 and 600, rapid fire, and participants in two skirmish runs.

MONEY FOR ALASKAN ROAD.

Kuhn-Loeb of New York, Backing the Eagle City Line.

That Kuhn-Loeb & Company, the big New York and London bankers, have been interested in the construction of the proposed railroad from Valdez to Eagle City in Alaska is the claim made by the local promoters of the enterprise, says the Seattle Star.

Until quite recently two rival parties were engaged in promoting the enterprise, but these have been brought into harmony and there is now no serious obstacle in the way of going ahead with construction work.

Colonel A. W. Swantz, who represents the interests, has been at Valdez the greater portion of the summer carrying on preliminary work and John Rosene visited that place recently in the interests of the rival company.

A. B. Iles of New York, who has been working on the project for four years, was in Valdez at the time and the three men got together and, it is reported, pooled their interests.

A powerful influence in bringing the warring interests together was the fact that both realized that it would be impossible to enlist outside capital in either scheme while there was a contest for the right of way, and a construction war on to decide which company would first occupy it. With this in view the rival companies have been harmonized, to the end that the capital for the construction of the line is now assured.

SPLENDID RUINS FOUND.

Rhodesia the Site of Finest Shrine Ever Discovered.

Richard N. Hall, who has given eight years to the study of the ancient monuments in southern Rhodesia, says that none of the hundreds of ruins has been more than partially explored, says the Geographical Journal. Many important ruins have been seen only by casual travelers, and the work of unearthing only a part of the Great Zimbabwe area would be more than the labor of a lifetime. Still, researches have made great progress in the past few years.

There are in Rhodesia no less than 300 distinct ruins and groups of ruins. Only a few of these are entitled to rank as "ancient." The larger part of them probably do not date back of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

There is overwhelming evidence at the Great Zimbabwe of the ancient civilization and arts possessed by the builders of the earliest periods. The Zimbabwe temple is the finest and most intact example of a nature worshipping shrine known to the world.

Its construction points unmistakably to some knowledge of geometry and astronomy on the part of the builders. It is quite certain that even the cruder methods of Zimbabwe of applying this knowledge, which was common to the ancient Semitic peoples, were imported from the near east and did not originate in south-east Africa.

The right ascension of the sun, the helical rising and the meridian passages of stars are believed to have been noted at Zimbabwe. These ancient builders were also past masters in the science of military defense the walls showing that the builders were military strategists of the highest order.

Their gold ornaments, finely designed and engraved, could not have been the work of uncivilized people, and the hundreds of ancient gold mines show that they were skilled in metallurgy and pick out rich shoots, patches and pockets with marvelous cleverness. It is estimated that from these widespread mines they extracted $375,000,000 of gold.
