UNION SERVICES AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Shooting Tournament, Football Game, Basketball and a Masquerade Ball Will Be the Amusements of Tomorrow—The Religious Services Will Be Participated in by the Resident Pastors, the Sermon Being Preached By Rev. Hall; Special Music Prepared by Prof. Traver.

Tomorrow will be Thanksgiving day, and it will be observed in Pendleton by a general suspension of business, the holding of special church services, a shooting tournament in the forenoon, a football game in the afternoon, and a basketball game in the evening. Also, there will be a masquerade ball in Music hall, given to the general public.

Special religious services will be held in the Christian church, in which all denominations of the city will participate. The program will commence at 10 o'clock and will last one hour. Special music for the occasion is being arranged under the direction of Prof. L. R. Traver. The Thanksgiving sermon will be preached by Rev. G. L. Hall, pastor of the local Baptist church. All who are thankful are cordially invited to attend the service.

lally this afternoon, the local stores have been scenes of activity, many purchases being made for the holiday. Naturally most of the business has been with the groceries and produce stores, but other lines of business have also shared more or less in the trade. From indications at present the weather will be ideal for the day and for the football contest in the afternoon. The snow furnishes the appearance of winter and will tend to brighten the freeways around which the families of the city will gather tomorrow.

Within the past day or two quite a number have arrived here for the purpose of spending the holiday with relatives, and likewise many whose homes are not here have left to join the family circle in other places. This evening many of the school people and others who live in adjoining towns will leave the city to return again by Monday.

WILL CHAPMAN RAN AMUCK

DRUNKEN FELLOW SHOOTS UP TOWN IN OLD STYLE.

Shoots Deliberately at Four Men Without Provocation, Giving All Close Calls—Frank Prestwood Had the Most Narrow Escape, His Coat and Trousers Being Perforated—Chapman Was Overpowered Only After His Gun Was Empty, and Spent the Night in Jail.

While crazed from the effects of drinking, Will Chapman, a young man ran amuck last evening about 5:30 and fired 11 or 12 shots from a revolver before he could be overpowered. Although he was in the business part of town and fired promiscuously at whoever appeared, no one was hit, though there were several narrow escapes.

Evidently Chapman cut loose without any provocation other than that of his own feelings, as aroused by the whiskey he had been drinking. He was first discovered on Garden street, directly back of the Armory building. He was then unaccompanied and began by firing two shots which he followed immediately with two more. The bombardment aroused T. T. Nelson, who was at his desk in his blacksmith shop on the corner of Garden and Alta streets. With two other men Mr. Nelson came out to investigate and started up Garden street sidewalk towards where the shots had been fired. However, when about half way there the man wheeled around and sent a bullet in their direction. At this, to use Mr. Nelson's language, he "backtracked" at a good lively clip, feeling that such was a good thing to do.

About this time Gene Morgan, of the Hermitage saloon, was coming down on the north side of Webb street, on his return from supper. He heard the shots fired by Chapman, and as he reached the corner the young man was but a short distance down Garden street and was engaged in reloading his pistol. According to Mr. Morgan he had just gotten past the man when a shot was fired, and he heard the bullet whiz past him. He then undertook to sprint and was encouraged by a second shot which was fired at him when he was about half way down the block. He finished the remaining distance and rounded the corner at what he feels was a nine-second clip.

In front of his saloon Morgan stopped and was telling his adventure to a friend, when around the corner loomed his pursuer with his gun still in action. Thinking he was being followed, Morgan dashed into his saloon, but instead of following, Chapman went down into the amusement parlors, and commenced a fusillade there. Three shots were fired in succession, the first one being aimed at J. R. Palmer, who entered the room directly after Chapman.

Quite a number of men were in the place at the time, and several had narrow escapes from being struck by the flying lead. Frank Prestwood, who was standing near the stove, had the closest call of all, one of the bullets passing through the small of his back, making a hole in his coat and also cutting the top of his trousers. However, it did not touch his body at all, and it was not until afterwards that Prestwood realized how close he came to being hit.

After the last shot had been fired by Chapman his gun was empty, and he was overpowered by Sam Williams, and others in the room. Meanwhile, Gene Morgan had run to the Henne-man cigar store and there turned in a police call. Night Officers Sheer and Manning soon arrived on the scene and Chapman was taken to the recorder's office and searched and then locked in the city jail. He had $11 in money on his person when taken; also the gun, which is a .38-calibre, hammerless Iver-Johnson revolver.

Says He Doesn't Remember.

Chapman is but little over 20 years of age, and is the son of Charles Chapman of Butte creek. For some time past he has been employed in the Walters' flour mill and quit work there yesterday. According to H. H. Wessel, who is well acquainted with the young man, he is perfectly reliable and ordinarily is far from being quarrelsome. Consequently, he is of the opinion that he was certainly drugged in some manner.

Those who were in the amusement parlor when Chapman first entered say that he did not appear drunk and handled himself well all during the affair. Because of this it is believed that he must have been given some doped liquor, or else he drank just enough to put him in a bad humor and make him want to play the role of bad man. This morning he was perfectly sobered, and declared to the officers and others that he could remember nothing that he had done last evening.

This morning a number of the witnesses to the shooting were summoned before District Attorney Phelps and an indictment will doubtless be returned against Chapman, either this afternoon or Friday. The charge will probably be that of assault with a dangerous weapon. The penalty for this offense may be made anything from one month to 10 years imprisonment, or a fine of from $100 to $1000.
