A little time for laughter, A little space for song, And tears that hurry after Ere we, too, come along. Like ripples on the river, As light on wind-swept grain, So pass our endeavors— We go, nor come again. Then make me, O Eternal, Still as Thy forces are; We thrive, as grasses vernal; We fade, as fades the star. —Melville Upton.

POLITICAL WHITEWASH.

The following two excerpts from the editorial columns of the Portland Oregonian, concerning Jonathan Bourne, show how easily that great organ can whitewash those whom it is forced to swallow, however objectionable the dose may be.

Here is the true Jonathan Bourne as viewed by the Oregonian on May 26, 1896, when it saw Mr. Bourne as he really was then and is today:

"Jonathan Bourne, a spectacular political hybrid, an avowed free silver fiatist, a populist wolf masquerading in a republican sheep's clothing, a modern Esau, willing to sell his political birthright for a paltry office, a metamorphosed prodigal son, who has eaten the succulent corn and thrown the husks to the sound money republicans."

And here is the same Jonathan Bourne, whitewashed by the Oregonian and presented to the people of Oregon as a candidate for the United States senate, 10 years later, on April 26, 1906:

"Mr. Bourne is the republican nominee for senator and he should receive republican support in the same manner and for the same reasons as the republican candidates for other offices are entitled to it. He is the style and type of man that does things, and overcomes all possible obstacles and difficulties in doing them. If he shall go to Washington as United States senator for Oregon, as seems probable, there will never be occasion on the part of any one to declare that the influence of Oregon is not felt at Washington."

LONG RANGE SLANDER.

In order to make his slander of democrats more impressive, the editor of the Portland Oregonian goes to Washington, D. C., to get inspiration, and then hurries back from the capital a column of narrow abuse and falsehood in hopes of influencing the vote in Oregon's coming election.

When he looks at the vacant seats in the house of representatives, where two Oregon congressmen should be sitting in the interest of their state, how can he anatomize the democrats of Oregon for protesting against the Oregonian and its party which have brought the state to this condition?

In place of engendering bitterness among the common people by making them believe they are divided on party lines, he could be busy reforming his own party and welding the common people together in the interest of their great state.

The vacant seats of Elmer Hermann and J. N. Williamson should silence the old man, until he could offer the people of Oregon some tangible evidence that his advice and counsel are whole and safe.

The people of Oregon should remember that the political name applied to a public servant does not affect his efficiency. Politics are used largely by selfish men, like the editor of the Oregonian, to keep the common people divided for the purposes of self-aggrandizement and advancement.

Oregon knows that some of her best state administrations have come from democratic governors. Just as she knows that some of her best national legislation has come through republican congressmen and senators. All democrats nor all republicans are not bad, nor are they all good, by any means.

If it becomes a public man to stoop to condemn all members of any party, for he will have to look but a short distance in his own party to find shortcomings which it is embarrassing to explain.

This long range slander from Washington will only arouse the people to demand capable men for offices in Oregon, regardless of the commands of the politicians.

MAKING A SECRET FIGHT.

The liquor interests, failing to secure the open support of any reputable Oregon newspapers in their crusade against the local option law, through a destructive amendment now before the people, are making a strong fight through the mail, by secret circulars, pleading letters and florid oratory and eloquence.

This amendment which is the child of the Oregon Liquor Dealers' association, destroys every feature of the local option law, takes away the penalties, makes it possible for a "wholesale house" to be placed in the heart of a residence district and completely annuls the wise provisions of the local option law which the people of Oregon passed by an initiative vote, and which the legislature dared not repeal.

So great has been the public indignation aroused by the domination of the liquor interests in the past, that even the avowed friends of the saloon among the newspapers, dare not openly advocate this saloon amendment to the people's law. The people who passed the local option law and who revere decency and uprightness in politics will vote "No" on this amendment.

JULY 1 AND MAY 30.

Pendleton offers the people of Umatilla county two holidays for the coming summer, Decoration Day and high school field meet on May 30, and a rousing celebration on July 4.

To both of these celebrations the people of Pendleton cordially invite their neighbors. Both occasions will be filled with fraternity and good-fellowship and on both occasions the people of this city will extend the warmest greeting to their visitors.

Through various turns of fate Pendleton has been denied a celebration for several years, and this year, for the most splendid response has been made to the calls of charity from made to the calls of humanity from Heppner, San Francisco, Mitchell and other stricken cities. Pendleton has given her substance freely to all the demands made upon her, and now it is time to turn all eyes toward home and celebrate in a truly western spirit.

The people of Umatilla county should be made to feel that this is their year in Pendleton. The city should offer them something out of the ordinary. It should be a memorable celebration.

END OF IROQUOIS THEATER.

The Iroquois Theater company, of Chicago, is bankrupt, and the many claimants for some aggregating $2,000,000 as compensation for damages in the Iroquois theater fire have no chance to recover.

The company was adjudicated bankrupt in Jersey City a short time ago, but not until this week was the new turn of affairs made public. The bankruptcy proceedings were involuntary and were begun March 26 and closed April 11. A trustee was appointed at a meeting of the creditors which was held May 11.

Nearly all of the merchandise creditors have been paid, and of the money realized by the sale of the play house to the Metropolitan Theater company almost nothing was left after the current liabilities had been covered.

WHEN?

When will the great world learn That its splendors but wither and fade?

When will the proud hearts turn From the thrones they with vanity made?

Bridging the chasms that lie between Poverty's heir and the Social Queen; Chasms, as measured by man, I mean.

When will the great world learn? How suddenly riches take flight? When will the cold hearts burn

At some pilgrim's lone cry in the night? Turning with scorn from the Social Creed.

Willingly sharing each brother's need, Out of the dark into light to lead,

When will the great world learn? That but one God is father of all? When will the weak hearts yearn

For strength to leave all at his call? "Child, it is only your heart," cries he, "Riches and splendors are naught to me.

Only a mist is your vanity." When will the great world learn? —M. Gertrude Robertson.

ADVERTISING LOS ANGELES.

Because it is feared that the San Francisco disaster may check the tourist and homeseeker rush to California, Los Angeles is now strenuously advertising her advantages.

The following are some classified reasons given by the Los Angeles Times, as to why Los Angeles is a good place to visit:

1. Los Angeles is more than 400 miles away from the scene of the disturbance which has laid San Francisco in ruins, partly by earthquake shock, but chiefly by fire. Only a slight tremor was felt in Los Angeles.

2. In all the history of southern California, extending back to the days of the Franciscan Fathers, about a century and a half, there has not been a serious earthquake in this region.

3. Los Angeles and the country round about, within a radius of 100 miles, while it has experienced some slight "tremors," has never had, within the knowledge of man, an earthquake shock strong enough to do any damage worth mentioning; hardly enough, in point of fact, "to move a brick" (unless, indeed, the brick were just ready to be toppled over.)

4. In the entire history of California, and that of the whole Pacific coast, down to the day of the San Francisco catastrophe less injury to property and less loss of life, has been inflicted by earthquake than has often been caused by a single tornado in one of the eastern states. And most of the damage in San Francisco was caused by fire, as noted above.

5. A disaster similar to that of San Francisco may never occur again in any part of the United States. It is as liable to occur in Boston, or New York, or Philadelphia as on the Pacific coast.—From the Los Angeles Times, April 25, 1906.

PRODUCTS OF LAVA.

Lava, like adversity, has its uses. It may be blown into opaque bottles of gossamer lightness, and the harder sort makes a beautiful green glass of half the weight and double the strength of ordinary glass.

But it is not always the same. Every volcano pours out its own special brand of molten mixture, disagreeable to meet on your walks, but sometimes yielding precious products, as ponzolano and pumice stones. Lava, like all things, decomposes under the touch of time, as the fertile plains of Sicily testify.

THE HORSE MUST GO.

It is announced that Mrs. Astor has arranged for the disposal of all her horses and carriages, and the man who has been her coachman for 25 years has been retired. An experienced chauffeur will take his place. This seems to be the general tendency in fashionable circles, though, of course, the horses and carriages are not destined to vanish right away. They will always be useful for a change.—New York Post.
