THE HORRORS OF WINTER IN ALASKA

Mrs. H. G. Klense of West Park street, has received from her son, Jack MacLane, a letter dated Chena, Alaska, April 15, in which conditions at Fairbanks are described, says the Butte Inter-Mountain. The letter was written before the recent million dollar fire in Fairbanks and the situation there and in Chena appears to have been bad enough before that conflagration.

Chena, so written by MacLane, is spelled Chisna on most maps and is given as 200 miles north of Valdez, as the crow flies. Fairbanks, not on most maps, is 20 miles from Chena. Both are on the American side and in a country which has experienced a recent gold rush. Both Chena and Fairbanks are rag towns. The population of the latter is only a few hundreds.

MacLane, who is well known in Butte, having served through the Philippine war with a Butte company, coming home a sergeant, and having been employed later as an engineer at the Butte reduction works, has been an engineer in the United States geodetic service for several years. He resigned last winter to go on a prospecting trip to the Fairbanks country.

With two companions, whose names are not given in the letter, MacLane left Valdez the middle of March. They had money but could not afford to buy a horse or dog. They expected to pack their prospecting outfit 200 miles to Chena.

Through the Gorges of the Dead.

A major part of the 20 days consumed in the walk to Chena was made on snowshoes. Fifty miles from Valdez, the party began to come upon sad traces of the fate of earlier adventurers. The trail was not crowded as the season was early, yet MacLane writes that dead horses and dogs were to be seen at every ascent. They saw many dead men and a few women, unburied by the way. They came upon exhausted parties of both sexes, begging for food and a lift back to Valdez. It was the rush over the Chilkot repeated, with all of its horrors.

The MacLane party was snowed in two days at a wayside "hotel," one of two or three on the trail, which, by the way, was 400 miles, instead of 200, owing to the tortuous gorges and long detours caused by the ranges.

Board was $7 a day at this hotel. Destitute women were housed and paid for by perfect strangers and men who had left Valdez well fixed begged leaveings about the tiny cabin. The MacLane party finally pushed on in the storm after a day's floundering in the drifts, decided to abandon their prospecting kits, in order to save their lives. While they were debating this step a dog team came along, going back, and the owner gave them $36 for kits that cost them several hundred. There were thousands of dollars' worth of abandoned goods on the trail, and on them, as often as not, lay their owners, victims of starvation and hunger.

Glad to Get Anything.

MacLane and his friends finally reached Fairbanks to find hundreds of men out of employment and everything very high. Board was $7 a day and room rent prohibitive. Hay was $700 a ton and people were letting their horses starve. There was some mining but wages were not paid until the clean-up and then, if the returns were poor, only a portion or nothing was paid. Men were glad to get work and board, even on these chances.

MacLane and his friends were practical miners, but there were hundreds ahead of them. MacLane finally got a job on a steamboat, while one of his friends went to washing dishes in a restaurant at $30 a month and board, the third man living with the letter was written, off the other two.

The country may open up in the spring and many of the miners will get work, but from MacLane's letter, the Fairbanks country is a good place to stay away from. Necessities are so high that few men can save enough to get out, unless they walk and those who walk will land in Seattle penniless.

The country is a rich man's mining country. There is plenty of gold, but it requires large capital. For the man with moderate capital, work for wages is the best, and there is no money in that.

The Myrtle Shriners of Denver have just laid the cornerstone of a new temple which will cost $200,000 and is dedicated to El Jebel. Imperial Potentate Harry A. Collins, of Toronto, officiated.

Portland in Darkness; Work of Boys.

Baling wire thrown across the high-tension feed cables of the Portland General Electric company in Albina by mischievous boys, members of the notorious "Albina gang," last night short-circuited the current, burned out a "pothead" at the North Portland steam plant, started a fire in the power station at Oregon City, throwing Portland and all its suburbs and Oregon City into utter darkness, tying up all street-car traffic and putting everything out of commission that was dependent upon electric current for motive power, says the Telegram. For nearly an hour darkness reigned. Churches, theaters and private dwellings were without light save where candles or gas could be used. The streets were in darkness, and thousands of persons who poured out of the public buildings looking vainly for cars to take them home, were drenched with rain.

CHICAGO MUTTON MARKET.

Cleaning-up Time in Feed Yards and Quality Was Poor.

The Chicago Livestock World says of the week's mutton market: Live mutton trade was about as inert as could be imagined. Quotably it was a 10@15c lower market. That is, buyers were apparently prepared to go ahead and do business on that basis, but they positively refused to consider last week's prices and appeared entirely indifferent as to whether they got stuff or not. Sellers were reluctant to concede the decline and a deadlock, that lasted until late in the day, resulted.

A top was made on a band of $2-pound western lambs with considerable wool at $6.50, but they had to be well sorted to do it. Last week the same kind sold straight at $6.50, and the price today looked like $6.35 straight.

Quality was not good. It is cleaning up time and feed lot consignments are largely on the tail-end order. Buyers argued that this deterioration in quality was largely responsible for what looked like a sharp decline in prices.

To get lambs into the $6.50 notch required both quality in the goods and an effort on the part of the seller. Up to a late hour $6.45 was the best price that had been developed and $6.25 was bid for good lambs. Such unfinished stock as was selling around $6 last week was declared by those who had them to sell to be a quarter lower.

If you see it in the East Oregonian its true.

FACTS IN NATURE.

Not Only Do We Get Inspiration From Nature, But Health as Well.

For people who are run-down and nervous, who suffer from indigestion or dyspepsia, headache, biliousness, or torpid liver, coated tongue with bitter taste in the morning and poor appetite, it becomes necessary to turn to some tonic or strengthener which will assist Nature and help them to get on their feet and put the body into its proper condition. It is becoming more and more apparent that Nature's most valuable health-giving agents are to be found in forest plants and roots.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. R. V. Pierce, now consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., discovered that by scientifically extracting and combining certain medicinal principles from native roots, taken from our American forests, he could produce a medicine which was marvelously efficient in curing cases of blood disorder and liver and stomach trouble as well as many other chronic, or lingering ailments.

This concentrated extract of Nature's vitality he named "Golden Medical Discovery." It purifies the blood by putting the stomach and liver into healthy condition, thereby helping the digestion and assimilation of food which feeds the blood. Thereby it cures weak stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, or biliousness, and kindred derangements.

If you have coated tongue, with bitter or bad taste in the morning, frequent headaches, feel weak, easily tired, stitches or pain in side, back gives out easily and aches, belching of gas, constipation, or irregular bowels, feel flashes of heat alternating with chilly sensations or kindred symptoms, they point to derangement of your stomach, liver and kidneys, which the "Golden Medical Discovery" will correct more speedily and permanently than any other known agent. Contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed in plain English on wrapper.

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make a little more profit. He gains; you lose. Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pills. One laxative; two or three are cathartic.
