MAY CLEAR STEVE ADAMS.

Crazy Miner Startles the Court With a "Confession."

A special from Wallace, Idaho, says of the development of the Adams murder trial:

"It is the heart that moves the hand. I am the man that killed Fred Tyler. Turn all these other fellows loose, for I am the man that done the deed."

This was the announcement which started Judge Wood's court this morning. A small dark stranger with long black hair and a stubby beard was standing up beside Steve Adams, proclaiming himself guilty of the crime for which Adams is on trial. A commotion followed.

Mrs. Adams burst into tears, Adams himself turned pale. Seized by two officers, the stranger was hurried from the court room to the sheriff's office. There he said his name was Patrick C. Ryan of Butte; that he had just finished a term in the Deer Lodge penitentiary.

After being released he said he had gone to Burke, where Roosevelt's daughter had told him to come to Wallace and take charge of this case. He said if Adams was convicted an earthquake would destroy the Cour d'Alene. Ryan will be committed to the asylum. Adams says he does not know the man.

This morning's session of the court was taken up mainly by Coroner Keys at the preliminary hearing, the attorneys having agreed to this method, owing to the coroner's illness. His testimony relates largely to the condition of the body of Tyler and the surroundings, where it was found in the woods.

While the defense still concedes its policy, signs have led to the prediction that Adams' attorneys will endeavor to cast doubt on the identification of Tyler's body, and will also uphold the theory that Adams was not in the Marble Creek region at the time this murder occurred. Adams is beginning to show some signs of the severe strain, and at times appears worried and uneasy. Mrs. Adams also has given signs of nervousness as the state masses its evidence.

Made a Clever Escape.

Wiley J. R. Burton, wanted at Caldwell, Idaho, for alleged embezzlement, cleverly eluded Sheriff Thorpe of Caldwell last night at Portland, and is still at large. Burton was eating his dinner when Thorpe and Detective Hellyer came for him. "Let me finish eating," he said, and Thorpe was willing, while the sight made Hellyer hungry and he left for home to get dinner. After finishing his meal, Burton engaged Thorpe in conversation. A little dog jumped on a bed in the room and Burton picked up the animal and carried him to the door to put him out. Before Thorpe realized what was happening Burton followed the dog and was gone in the darkness.—Caldwell News.

Lost 150 Hogs Out of 500.

A drove of 350 hogs arrived in Wallowa Tuesday evening on route to Elgin from Enterprise. They were all that were able to get through of a drove of 500 belonging to M. E. Hotchkiss. They will be held in the pens until traffic is resumed on the railroad, when they will be shipped to Portland. They were driven down by William Mahaffey, J. S. Reagan and George Childers.—Wallowa Sun.

A Nose Tax.

A "nose tax" was in the ninth century exacted by the Danes from the householders in Ireland. It was so called not because it was levied on noses, but from the fact that a failure to pay was punished by slitting the nose from tip to eyebrow. It was continued during thirteen years, when the householders, objecting to this treatment of their nasal ornaments, rose in rebellion, massacred all the Danes in Ireland and put an end to the nose slitting.

Quite a Difference.

Employer—Young man, I hear that you bet on horse races. You are discharged. Youth—But my brother-in-law is a bookie. I have netted $6000 on his tip this week. Employer—Ah—er—close the door, please. Young man, your salary is doubled. Consider yourself my confidential adviser.—London Tit-Bits.

His System.

"I alius predict good weather," said the suburban sage.

"Why?"

"Well, if it is good I get credit for it, an' if it ain't good the folks all allow that I done my best."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Perhaps.

He—Why is it that unmarried women are usually "girls"? She—Possibly for the same reason that married men are mostly "boys."

BITULITHIC ADOPTED.

Eugene Turns Down the Paving of the Asphalt Trust.

The Eugene Guard says of the adoption of the bitulithic paving for that city:

Mayor Wilkins and the members of the city council who went to Portland one day last week to examine the different kinds of pavement in use on the streets there, with a view of determining which is the best material to be placed on Eugene's streets have returned.

While there has been no public expression of the decision of the party, if there has been any made, it is understood that all are of the opinion that the bitulithic pavement is the best, and at the meeting of the council tomorrow night it will be decided to use that material.

The bitulithic has been in use in Portland for the past four years and has given splendid satisfaction there. On one street where the traffic is heavier than on any other street in the city the bitulithic has stood for four years without the expenditure of one cent for repairs, and it now appears to be as good as when it was put down.

It is said the cost of laying this pavement in Eugene will be less than in Portland because of the cheapness of crushed rock here, and it will no doubt last longer here than in Portland.

No School Tomorrow.

The public schools will close tomorrow in honor of Washington's birthday anniversary. There will be no program in any of the schools. The high school enjoyed a half holiday this afternoon.

K. P. Building at Baker City.

One of the most important real estate deals of the season was closed yesterday when the Knight of Pythias, Gauntlett lodge No. 8, Baker City, completed all arrangements and secured the necessary cash for the finishing of their temple on the corner of First and Washington streets. The building will cost about $25,000, and will be one of the handsomest structures in Baker.

The foundations for the K. P. building were laid last summer and the completion of the edifice will now be but a matter of a short time. Bids will be called for at once and construction work will begin as soon as the details can be arranged.—Baker City Democrat.

Rise of Oswald West.

From the driver of a butcher's cart to state railroad commissioner is a most desirable promotion. Truly Oswald West is a lucky "boy." Politics aside, he will make an efficient officer. He made a very competent paying teller in Salem's principal bank, and also served Oregon well as state land agent. Mr. West's boyhood days were spent to a certain extent assisting his father who was a stock buyer and butcher.—Salem Statesman.
