ODD COMPLIMENTARY GIFTS.

From a long list of odd gifts that have been presented to distinguished people, given in Tit-Bits, the following are selected.

In India the native rajahs consider it the highest possible compliment to be presented with fine specimens of wild beasts, and consequently both King Edward and the Prince of Wales have been the recipients of many gifts of this description. But when, one fine day, two splendid tigers arrived unexpectedly at Sandringham, King Edward was driven to remembrance. "I have accommodation," he said, "for horses, cows, cats, mice and even rats, but I must draw the line at tigers."

An odd gift was received by the crown prince of Germany upon his coming of age. A deputation of butchers attended, bearing an enormous and magnificent steak, upon the surface of which was worked in sweet greetings to the future monarch.

The late Prince Bismarck once received from some miners in Westphalia a bust of himself carved in coal, and it is said that this odd present was always carefully preserved by him and looked upon Suit to Recover Damages.

Suit to collect $1200 damages from the Maxwell Land & Irrigation company was filed here today by Fred A. Yates, who alleges that he has been injured to that extent by a ditch constructed across his land by the defendants. F. H. Bartlett of Hermiston is attorney for the plaintiff.

somewhat in the light of a luck bringer.

A compliment which had serious results was paid to an actor named Hanson at a mining town in British Columbia. The audience was so stirred by Mr. Hanson's acting that some persons began throwing presents upon the stage, like spectators at a Spanish bull fight. One burly miner, having nothing else handy, hurled a lump of gold ore. Unluckily it hit the actor on the head and knocked him down. He was badly injured and it was weeks before he was able to play again.

Perhaps the oddest idea of paying a compliment belongs to a tribe of Indians on the Alaskan coast. When a chief wishes to do honor to a distinguished visitor, he invites him to a "potlatch," or feast. Then when all have eaten the chief goes to the edge of the cliff and solemnly casts into the sea as many of his possessions as he thinks he can afford. This is held to be the highest form of compliment and much superior to merely giving presents to the guests.

ENVIRONMENT AND INGERSOLL.

To many people environment seems a hopeless thing, closely allied to a living death. For these, environment might not be inaptly symbolized by a skeleton which, with bony fingers, forever pushes back and down the man who would free himself from his surroundings.

But look closely! Back of the ghastly, grinning face you will see outlined the rosy, smiling, youthful, alluring features of Opportunity.

All environment is but the gateway to Opportunity. Perhaps you have heard the story of the man who dreamed he died and went to hell. When he arrived there he was agreeably surprised to find what a pleasant place it was. Presently he met a few men who had been celebrities during their earthly lives, and among them was Colonel Ingersoll. Our friend expressed to the colonel his great surprise at the beauty and generally desirable condition of his surroundings. "Well," replied Ingersoll, "you ought to have seen this place when we first came here!" —William E. Towne in July Nautilus.

JUNE.

A month whose promise and fulfillment blend

And burst in one! It seems the earth can store

In all her roomy house no treasure more;

Of all her wealth no farthing have to spend

On fruit, when once this stintless flowering end.

And yet no tiniest flower shall fall before

It hath made ready at its hidden core

Its title of seed, which we may count and tend

Till harvest. Joy of blossomed love for thee

Seems it no fairer thing can yet have birth?

No room is left for deeper ecstasy? Watch well if seeds grow strong to scatter free

Gems for thy future summers on the earth.

A joy which is but joy soon comes to earth.

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

A SANE SUNDAY.

Of Sunday and its observance Walt Whitman says in the July American Magazine:

"Sunday—Sunday, we make it the dullest day in the week when it might be made the cheeriest. Will the people ever come to baseball, plays, concerts, yacht races, on Sunday? That would seem like a clear day after a storm. Why do you suppose people are so narrow-minded in their interpretation of the Sunday? If we read about Luther we find that he was not gloomy, not sad—devout, not sickly religious; but a man full of blood who didn't hesitate to outrage ascetic customs or play games if he felt like it on Sunday. The Catholic regards Sunday with a more nearly sane eye. It does seem as though the Puritan was responsible for our Sunday; the Puritan had his virtues but I for one owe him a grudge or two which I don't hesitate to talk about loud enough to be heard."
