He will spend a few days with his mother, Mrs. Matthews of this city, before returning to his duties as relief agent in Washington points for the Pacific Express company.—La Grande Observer.

W. G. Hodder came up from his Dog mountain home the first of the week, bringing a fine specimen of grain which was grown on an alkali spot on his place. The heads were well filled and an acre like it would make better than 36 bushels. Mr. Hodder was late getting his grain in, sowed it broadcast, was poorly covered and yet he will have a most satisfactory yield.—Burns Times-Herald.

Fuel Situation at La Grande.

The scarcity of coal, inadequate shipping facilities and various other reasons will be responsible for coal selling at $10 to $11 in this city the coming winter, according to a local coal dealer.

According to prices demanded for coal laid down in La Grande, the dealer will be forced to retail the coal at about $10.75. These prices pertain to the coal that has been promised La Grande dealers, but has not arrived. Continued promises on the part of the producers and the railroads lead the dealers to believe that it will ultimately arrive here, but at such a cost that to realize any margin of profit at all the retail dealer will sell at the prices named, or even higher. La Grande is face to face with as high-priced fuel as any city and perhaps before the winter is over the consumers will be more than glad to get it at prices which are now indicated.

The price continues to crawl upward, and at no slow rate.

Cost of coal at the mines, according to a letter received from the producers by one dealer in this city, will be about $5.50. Adding to this the cost of transportation, it can readily be seen that a slight increase in prices will shoot the retail prices to a point scarcely attainable by the average workman.—La Grande Observer.

Gus Johnson Killed.

Gus Johnson, who lived in Baker last winter and is well known here, was killed yesterday while loading logs at the Stoddard Brothers' logging camp a few miles out of Sumpter. He was on the load assisting in the work when a swamp hook gave way and he fell backward to the ground breaking his neck. Mr. Johnson was a good, straightforward citizen, a man who took the world as it came without complaint. His remains were cared for by his friends.—Baker City Herald.

Indians With Blue Eyes.

One of the mysteries of Mexico is presented by the Maya Indians, who inhabit the Sierra Madre mountains in the lower part of Sonora. They have fair skins, blue eyes and light hair, and students of ethnology have always been puzzled to account for them. There is a tradition, however, that these Indians are the descendants of the crew and passengers of a Swedish vessel wrecked on the Mexican coast centuries before Columbus discovered the new world, but this tradition is founded on nothing more substantial than a folklore tale current among them that their ancestors came over the big salt water hundreds of moons ago.

An Ancient Prayer.

Old John Ward, who was pilloried by Pope in the "Dunclad" and who actually stood in the pillory in the year 1727, when he was said to have been worth £200,000, was nevertheless a pious man. He had large estates in London and Essex and did not omit to pray for their welfare in the following manner: "O Lord, I beseech thee to preserve the two counties of Middlesex and Essex from fire and earthquake, and as I have a mortgage in Hertfordshire I beg of thee likewise to have an eye of compassion on that county, and, for the rest of the counties, deal with them as thou pleaseth."

The Vulgar One.

Cornhill Magazine tells of an Englishwoman of high station who bewailed to a friend the loss by death of a somewhat ill bred but extremely wealthy neighbor who had been very liberal in his help to her country charities. "Mr. X. is dead," said she. "He was so good and kind and helpful to me in all sorts of ways. He was so vulgar, poor, dear fellow, we could not know him in London, but we shall meet in heaven."

Odd Coincidence.

Not many years since a pastor in New York state read in his pulpit this portion of a hymn:

Well, the delightful day will come
When my dear Lord shall take me home,
And I shall see his face—

Just then he was stricken with paralysis and died in a few moments. Thirty-three years before in the same pulpit another pastor was reading the very same stanza when he, too, was stricken and died.—Scrap Book.

Sheepgrowers' State Convention.

Dan P. Smythe, of Pendleton, who was here looking after the sale of 2000 sheep to the Union Meat Co., of Portland, stated the Oregon Woolgrowers' association will meet on Tuesday, November 12 in The Dalles. The session will probably last for two or three days and will be of great interest and importance to all men who are interested in woolgrowing. Among the prominent people to attend will be Gifford Pinchot, of the forestry bureau of the government, and A. F. Potter, chief of the grazing department, along with many of the local foresters. The delegation in congress from Oregon is expected and most of them have stated positively that they will attend.

Mr. Smythe said, generally speaking, the sheep interests of the northwest are in excellent condition, but the more limited range and other things which are showing up to militate against the industry are subjects of greatest moment. These will be discussed at the woolgrowers' meeting, as will also the question of enforcing the scab law and marketing of wool. He expressed a desire that sheepmen of this section of the country get together and organize by electing a delegation to represent them at the The Dalles meeting in November. —Baker City Herald.

For Sale.

At Massillon, O., 62 horses, including Effie K. and Atwood, fast trotters, were burned to death in a fire at a livery stable. Thirty-two horses were rescued. One hostler was burned to death.

"BE READY"

ALL indications point toward a record-breaking run of business for all Pendleton merchants this fall and winter.

Are you ready, Mr. Pendleton Merchant? Do the people of Pendleton and the surrounding country know you are well stocked and fully prepared to receive their patronage? Have you planned your fall publicity campaign, so that the people may be brought into closer touch and more fully acquainted with the lines of merchandise you carry?

If not—DO IT NOW.

PUBLICITY is the life of BUSINESS. The advertising of a store is, therefore, the very life of the establishment. Too much thought and care cannot be bestowed upon it. 'Tis a poor contractor that builds a house without any plans—the same may be said of the merchant whose wares are not made known to the public by some plan or system.

The man who does not advertise simply because his grandfather did not, ought to wear knee breeches and a queue.

The man who does not advertise because it costs money, should stop paying rent for the same reason.

The man who does not advertise because he tried it and failed, should throw away his cigar because the light went out.

The man who does not advertise because he doesn't know how himself, ought to stop eating because he can't cook.

Take time by the forelock, prepare your advertising now, before the busy season begins. If you wish to reach the people in a DEPENDABLE way, place an advertisement in the East Oregonian, "The Paper That Goes Home." Should you care to investigate the cost or ask about certain spaces, just ring up Main 1 and the AD MAN will count it a personal pleasure to call and give you any information.
