OFFICERS INSTALLED IN FREEWATER HIVE.

Residence Destroyed by Fire Yesterday — People on Interurban Cars Assist in Carrying Out Household Goods—Defective Flue the Cause—Fine Sample of Eagle on Exhibition—Apples Going Out.

Freewater, Jan. 22.—The following officers have been initiated into the Freewater hive No. 21, Mrs. Nanie Handy, district commander for eastern Oregon, being here for the installation: Past lady commander, Mrs. Alta Evans, commander, Mrs. Lena Jenkins, lieutenant, Kady Crisens, record keeper, Lily Evans; sergeant, May Johnson; mistress at arms, Pearl Haynie; sentinel, June Anderson; picket, Fannie Stewart.

Residence Destroyed by Fire.
The residence of George Overturf, who lives a short distance from here, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Nearly all the household effects were saved, however. One of the interurban cars was passing at the time and the crew and passengers got off and carried out what stuff they could from the house. The fire originated from a defective flue.

D. C. Sanderson, of the Freewater Times, has on exhibition in his office a fine American gray eagle which was caught in a coyote trap on Dry creek by G. O. Sprague. The bird measures from tip to tip seven feet and is about 14 inches high.

Apples Go Out.
Some apple shipments are being made. The Blalock Fruit company has shipped a couple of carloads from here of late.

A number of people from this vicinity attended the poultry show in Walla Walla this week.

WAS BURIED ALIVE.

Growsome Discovery Made in Opening Grave at Tillamook.

A growsome story comes from the Tillamook district. A letter from Bay City, Oregon, says: Away back in 1888 Richard Churchill, after a trip from the Willamette valley to Tillamook, was taken suddenly ill, died and was buried near the last named place. At the time his death was surrounded by mystery, but talk soon died out, and the matter was forgotten.

A short time ago a nephew, Walter Churchill, decided to transfer the remains of his deceased relative to the Odd Fellows' cemetery above Tillamook City and on taking up the casket, examination indicated that the man had been buried alive. The skull was found to be lying face downward, one leg was drawn up almost to the body, and both arms were found on the left side as though the man had partially turned over before death finally came to his relief.

The report given out at the time of Mr. Churchill's death was that the end was the result of heart disease. He was at the time traveling with a stranger and was known to be in possession of a considerable sum of money, and the sudden death was looked upon as suspicious, but no investigation was made.

Indications are that the man was not dead when buried, but had probably been drugged, robbed and put out of the way by burial. It was not likely if he met with foul play, which the existing circumstances would indicate was the case, that anything can now be done to bring the guilty ones to justice, especially as the persons on whom suspicion would naturally fall, has not been seen in this section of the state since the time of Mr. Churchill's funeral, nearly twenty years ago.

OREGON PIONEER DIED AT SALEM

DR. L. L. ROLAND, FIRST
STATE SUPERINTENDENT

Pioneer of 1844 and One of the Leading Public Spirited Men of the State—Was Owner of 800-acre Stock Ranch Near The Dalles and a Prominent Breeder.

The Salem Statesman says of Dr. L. L. Roland, Oregon's first state school superintendent, who died yesterday at the Salem hospital:

Dr. Rowland came to Oregon in 1844 and was one of Oregon's most honored pioneers. He was Oregon's first superintendent of public instruction, having been elected to that office in 1874. The doctor was of English ancestry and was born at Nashville, Tennessee, on September 17, 1831.

When thirteen years of age, he crossed the plains to Oregon with his father and they settled on a government donation claim, where he remained, helping his father in the improvement of the farm, where he obtained such practical information in regard to stock and farming as was of value to him in later years.

When 18 years old he entered into an agreement with his father to go to California to the gold mines which had just been discovered. The bargain was that his father was to have half of the proceeds. He mined from 1849 to 1851 and met with fair success; half the proceeds were paid to his father, and half he invested in Mexican cattle.

The work in the gold mines and his profit on the investment in stock gave him the means with which he obtained his education. He accordingly went to Bethany college, Virginia, taking the courses and obtaining his degrees. He then traveled in nearly every state and territory of the union, teaching in different places and in the meantime studying medicine.

On November 18, 1859, at Marvin, Alabama, he was married to Miss Emma J. Sardus. She was a native of Alabama, having been born May 1, 1839, and was a graduate of Franklin college, Tennessee. They had five children, four of whom died in their infancy. Their surviving daughter, Miss Levia, married Jay C. Smith of this city, now of San Francisco. After his marriage, Mr. Rowland returned to Oregon, where he obtained his medical degree, in Willamette university, the profession which he followed ever since.

In 1874 he was elected state superintendent of public instruction, in which capacity he served for four years, when he went to Europe for two years, attending lectures and traveling in Egypt and the orient.

During all of his career the doctor was actively engaged in educational interests and had the honor of having attached to his name the four degrees, M. D., LL. D., F. R. S., and M. A.

He was an ordained minister of the Christian denomination, and was at one time, president of their college at Monmouth, now the state normal school. He was also a county school superintendent and in 1860 organized and conducted the first teachers' institute held in the state.

In 1863 he became the owner of a ranch of 800 acres at The Dalles, on which ranch he bred many fine horses, for which he received many first premiums. He was at one time an active member of the state agricultural society in which he served as vice president.

A Cure for Misery.

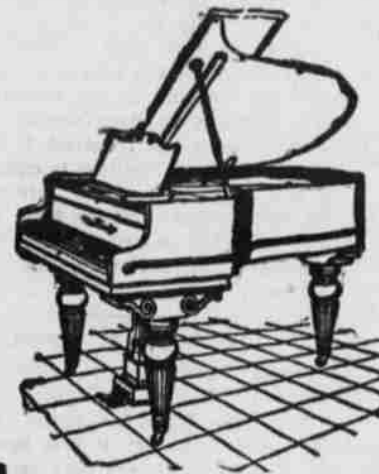

"I have found a cure for the misery malaria poison produces," says R. M. James of Louellen, S. C. "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50 cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow jaundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.

No More Tobacco for Minors.

Pursuant to his adopted policy of putting a stop to all violations of the anti-gambling law in this city and to strict enforcement of the city ordinances prohibiting the sale or giving of tobacco in any form to minors, Mayor Rodgers last night gained entrance to a gambling house in the rear of a cigar store and put a stop to the games in progress, and Chief of Police Gibson caught a Japanese proprietor of a State street cigar store and arrested the proprietor for shaking dice with and giving a package of cigarettes to a minor, says a Salem item. All minors caught with tobacco in their possession or in use will be arrested and prosecuted under the same ordinance.
