FADS AND FANCIES

New York, Feb. 22.—There should be no difficulty in securing a coat of becoming proportions this spring, for all types are to be seen: The long tight-fitting coat, the Empire coat, which is long, loose and set on a yoke and sometimes ornamented with a scarf of lace; there is also the long wrap with its kimono touches, the short or long cutaway in its various lengths; all sorts of coats from the well-known box-coat, through the many styles to the "above the waist" jacket such as the Etons and Boleros.

Just now women choose the longer and heavier modes, but later the short jacket and the Etons and Boleros will come into their own.

All kinds of fabrics are used in these garments, even lace coats are used for evening wear or extremely dressy daytime functions where no warmth is required and wraps are permissible.

An item that must be remembered always is the linings. When any degree of warmth is wished it is better to have an interlining, for the "seen" lining is of silk in a thin and chignon quality, sometimes broadened, sometimes finished with insets of lace, dushings, etc.; of course, the daytime coat is less elaborate in its linings, which should be of heavier silk or satin. In the cheaper grades they will be of cotton taffeta and the mercerized satens.

A very handsome redingote of blue velvet was shown the other day and intended for a morning reception given by a public official. The upper part of the coat was cut on blouse lines, but drawn closely in at the waist, by means of tiny tucks. The fronts were thrown back, revealing a vest of cream silk embroidered in pastel tinted silks and the revers were of Princess lace, while the cuffs had an inset of embroidered silk and a band of the lace. The long skirts were attached to the waist portion under a belt or girde; they were very full and had no trimming whatever.

A handsome evening draw was developed from ivory broadcloth trimmed with bands of embroidery and broad pendants. The garment was simple in its shaping, being nothing more than a loose coat and the sleeves were full and of the kimono style cut in a deep point at the back. The flat hand collar which extended down the front was of the embroidery and the closing was under a pendant. Shorter bands overlapping each other passed back and front and were also decorated with pendants and on the point of the sleeve was an inset of the embroidery, in the center of which was a pendant. Such a coat is very serviceable for wear over gowns of the princess and Empire modes when of lace or silk or soft and easily crushed materials and it is easy to be handled. The same coat could be made from Venetian cloth and trimmed with braided collar and cuffs and fastened with braid bows or fancy buttons. The sleeves could be drawn into cuffs braided to correspond with the collar. The lining should be of soft silk in the same shade or of a contrasting color. For traveling or a tourist coat grey tweed or olive lady's cloth would be appropriate materials which could be daintily finished with silk or velvet trimmings.

In a tourist coat a high collar would be a more serviceable-idea than the low flat band. Instead of having it in full long length it could be cut only to the knees or even shorter if preferred, but a little above the bottom of the skirt makes it the better length for all purposes. If not too elaborate in its construction it could often take the place of a rain coat.—Catherine Mann-Payant.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be his grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

DECREASE IN SALMON CATCH.

Fish Warden's Report Shows Decline in Columbia River Catch of 20 Per Cent.

A special to the Oregonian from Salem states:

The annual report of Master Fish Warden Van Dusen was made public today. It shows that during the year there were caught on the Oregon side of the Columbia river 15,798,116 pounds of chinook salmon; 1,045,516 pounds of silversides; 1,125,009 pounds steelheads, and 196,102 pounds blue backs, or a total of 18,151,743 pounds. The total catch of 1906 was 22,908,000 pounds, which shows a falling off for 1907 of about 20 per cent. The product for Oregon coast streams for the year was: Chinooks, 2,018,643 pounds; silversides, 3,852,112 pounds; steelheads, 210,520 pounds; tules, 657,407 pounds, or a total of 6,738,682, against 8,043,690 pounds in 1906, or a falling off for 1907 of about 30 per cent.

PURSUE COYOTE 24 HOURS.

Hounds Finally Capture Largest Specimen Ever Seen at Spokane.

Perhaps the largest coyote scalp ever taken into the county auditor's office for bounty was delivered there yesterday by W. H. Taulman of Foot Hill. It came from a coyote that was killed by Mr. Taulman's nine Missouri bloodhounds Sunday evening after a chase lasting over 24 hours, says the Spokesman-Review.

Mr. Taulman's hounds, of which seven are pups, first scented the coyote and a pack of associates about noon Saturday. They kept on the scent until Sunday night, when the biggest animal in the pack was cornered. The coyote put up a good fight and held the hounds at bay for more than an hour before finally succumbed. Once during the fight he appeared as if dead, but when the hounds closed in on him he got up on his haunches and bit two or three of the dogs painfully. Mr. Taulman appeared on the scene at the last of the struggle, and when the coyote was so weak he could scarcely bite, broke out some of his teeth in order that his hound pups might have an opportunity to practice chewing a coyote's throat without incurring danger.

Mr. Taulman says the coyotes are numerous in his vicinity and that he intends making a business of hunting them.

HORSE FLESH SAUSAGE.

Chicago Butcher Furnished Residents a New Luxury to Which They Do Not Take Kindly.

Sausage made from horse meat is a luxury that has been furnished for some time to residents of Chicago Heights by J. J. Schmidt, grocer and sausage manufacturer, according to charges on which Schmidt has been arrested and bound over to the grand jury, says a Chicago dispatch.

Suspensions of residents of the suburban town were aroused by evidences that flesh was being cut from carcasses on the dump near the place and from the fact that Schmidt was selling sausage at retail for half the price he would have to pay for meat at wholesale.

UPLIFT THE DANCE

"DANCER" TELLS SOCIETY
SOME PLAIN TRUTHS

No Objections to Elevating Amusement But Bitterly Opposes the Use of Intoxicants and the Presence of Drunken Men in Respectable Dances — Dance Whenever You Need the Recreation, But Make the Dance Clean and Wholesome.

Pendleton, Feb. 21.—(Editor East Oregonian.)—Much has been said on the subject of dancing during the past week or two, and there has been some pretty severe criticism of those who condemn dancing and characterize it as a sinful and dangerous form of amusement. I should like to say a few words upon this subject, if you will grant me a small amount of space in your columns.

It seems to me that the majority, including good, moral people and many church people, are unanimous in the opinion that it is futile to attempt or expect to abolish dancing as an amusement, or to convince the majority of good, moral and Christian people that it is entirely bad or dangerous.

Since public opinion seems to be so fixed, it would seem that the only course to pursue in the matter is to elevate the moral tone of the dance, and I feel safe in asserting that few will deny there are great possibilities along this line; not alone in the public dances which we have always with us, but in a great many of the club dances and in some of the private dances. It is of the last two that I wish to speak particularly.

In the first place, if the dance is to be a clean, wholesome amusement, why do good, clean, sober, moral people tolerate for a minute the serving of intoxicants?

In the second place, why do these same people tolerate the presence of men who are under the influence of liquor to a very marked degree, and even allow men who frequent saloons and whose breath is always foul with the odor of intoxicants to assume places of prominence and leadership at what is considered a respectable dance?

That both of these conditions exist, and at a great many of the dances which are participated in by our best people, none can deny; not with the sanction and approval of the pure and right thinking womanhood or of the clean and true manhood that we find there, however. There must be something wrong with a social system that will even tolerate these things which we all know to be offensive to a great many—I may not say the majority, for certainly the majority would include those whose only object in attending a dance is for an evening's pleasurable amusement surrounded by one's friends.

There is something wrong with such a system, and I do not hesitate to say that if one-half the energy that is spent in producing argument in justification of the dance as an innocent amusement were directed toward purifying and making it more wholesome by banishing intoxicants and those who use them, our wives, sisters and daughters would not have their evening's pleasure marred by being compelled to dance with that brute—who calls himself a man, and a society man at that—whose foul breath and foolish talk and glassy

When a young girl's thoughts become sluggish; when she has headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep; dislikes the society of other girls; then the mother should come to her aid promptly, for she possesses information of vital importance to the young daughter.

At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and has helped to bring three generations safely from girlhood to womanhood. Read what

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. eye would mark him a common drunk under other circumstances.

These things do exist, to the shame and displeasure of many good people who dance and find pleasure in innocent amusement in it. The remedy is clear and not difficult to apply. Bar the intoxicating drink—the punch with the "stick" in it—and kick out the man who "fills up" before he goes to the dance. If he can't enjoy the dance unless he is intoxicated, he is not a fit person to associate with your wife or sister or daughter, and she would be glad to be rid of his presence.

"Now, sir," said Tommy's father, "don't be a little jackass."
