

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

ARTICLE ON ROOSEVELT WHICH TOOK SENATOR BOURNE'S $1000

Owing to the widespread interest in Senator Bourne's $1000 offer for the best article written on the reasons why President Roosevelt should accept a second elective term, the East Oregonian publishes the article by Judge Frank H. Norcross of Nevada, which won the $1000 prize.

The article is as follows: The assertion that "the sovereign people and not Theodore Roosevelt, the individual and public servant, will decide who shall be his successor" is so manifest that it will not admit of argument to the contrary. The views of the president are entitled to most respectful consideration, but they are not necessarily conclusive, even where the question is whether he shall succeed himself.

The position of the president regarding his own candidacy is well known. Immediately following the election in 1904 he issued a statement to the people, which statement he reiterated on the 11th of December last, upon the occasion of the call of the republican national committee for the convention at Chicago. That statement is as follows:

"I am deeply sensible of the honor done me by the American people in thus expressing their confidence in what I have done and have tried to do. I appreciate to the full the solemn responsibility this confidence imposes upon me, and I shall do all that in my power lies not to forfeit it. On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and three and a half years shall constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

There is no reason why the foregoing announcement should be accepted by the American people as conclusive simply because it comes from Mr. Roosevelt. If there is room for a difference of opinion as to fact or reason, or both, the good judgment of the whole people must be, and is, decisive.

Old Custom in Force. The only custom that prevails in this country regarding the terms of office of our presidents to elective terms, the president, unquestionably, does not come within the letter of this custom. If the custom is to undergo modification, Mr. Roosevelt certainly has not the right to all the say regarding that modification.

Doubtless, when Mr. Roosevelt issued the foregoing statement, he was prompted more or less by modesty. For him to insist, however, that the views therein expressed are conclusive would be the height of arrogance. It is probably the fact that the people do not care for any innovations upon the custom in question.

The great mass of American people are well pleased with the administration of President Roosevelt. They want him for two elective terms, and they have the right to say whether his reelection will be a violation of a custom of debateable wisdom. Mr. Roosevelt has never been an advocate of short measure in any of his dealings with the people.

There is neither reason nor consistency in his saying now that the people shall accept three and a half years as a full term when they are entitled to four. The citizens of this country are always entitled to the full bushel of wheat. If, in order to obtain it, they must take it heaped and running over, who will object, unless it be those who, for personal reasons, do not want the people to have all that is coming to them?

The only reason offered by the president why he will not again become a candidate is that it will violate the "substance" of the custom. To insist upon such a conclusion, in view of all the facts to be considered, would place "his own personal desires or egotistical opinions paramount to the combined wishes and intelligence of the republican party and the electorate of the nation."

Only One Roosevelt Term. As a matter of fact, the people will not have had the substance of two administrations of President Roosevelt at the close of his present term. To prove this, all that is necessary is to quote from the language of the president and cite a little recent history.

In that dark hour of universal sorrow following immediately upon the death of our beloved President McKinley, Vice President Roosevelt was notified of the president's death by the members of Mr. McKinley's cabinet, then present in Buffalo and advised to at once take the oath of office as president. The reply of the vice president is significant:

"I shall take the oath at once, in accordance with your request, and in this hour of deep and terrible national bereavement I wish to state that it shall be my aim to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity and honor of our beloved country."

This declaration quieted the fears of the people that there might be a change in the policy of the administration, the uncertain nature of which would have a tendency to upset, to a greater or less extent, the financial and commercial interests of the country. In line with his solemn declaration, the president requested the members of McKinley's cabinet to remain at the head of their respective departments and constitute his official family, as they had constituted his predecessor's. This invitation was accepted. What Mr. Roosevelt intended to call his first term was, in reality, the second term of President McKinley, by Theodore Roosevelt, acting in a capacity similar to that of an administrator with the will annexed.

It may be conceded that during those three and a half years the people obtained some intimation of the character of administration Mr. Roosevelt would inaugurate, should he be elected president, and thus become free to carry out his own policies.

As a matter of fact, however, he never lost sight of his declaration, made in all solemnity at Buffalo, "to carry out absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley." How, then, can his reelection violate the substance any more than it does the form of the custom? It violates neither.

If the great mass of the American people, regardless of party affiliation, desire that the president succeed himself, and I believe they do, unquestionably, it would be folly for them to regard the statement of Mr. Roosevelt as conclusive. The office of President of the United States is so exalted, and its administration so affects the welfare of all, that the people will never concede that any citizen can refuse to accept it when tendered.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, has not declared that he will decline the office should he receive the electorate vote of the nation. We need not fear that he would think of refusing it. He is too good a soldier and too patriotic an American to refuse to obey the command of the people to stay in the harness until he finishes the good work he has inaugurated.

If the American people will stop to think for a moment they will realize that, "barring death or serious illness, President Roosevelt must and will be selected and elected for a second elective term."

The people are with him in the great work he has undertaken. They have the utmost faith in his honesty of purpose. They appreciate his transcendent ability to deal with the great problems now confronting the state. They realize his courage, his initiative, his vast experience, his tremendous capacity for effective work. They believe in his purpose to enforce the law impartially, without respect to person, wealth or station. They have an abiding faith in the ultimate good that will result to this nation from his persistent campaign against legal and moral wrongdoing. They comprehend the value of having such a man as chief executive.

The People Know Roosevelt.

No other man has such a hold upon the confidence of the people. No other man can gain such confidence without years of trial. The people know what Roosevelt is; they do not know what some other man may become. The policies of Roosevelt are in course of execution. Few, at this time, have reached ultimate conclusion. To place another man at the head of this government would mean, for some time to come, delay, uncertainty, if not possible disappointment in the successful carrying out of the problems of government the president has essayed to solve.

For President Roosevelt to be permitted to give up the reins of government at the end of his first elective term because of such illogical and petty reasons as have been offered, against the wish of the great mass of the people, in the present condition of governmental affairs, would be worse than folly.

There is but one logical and reasonable thing to do under the circumstances, and that is for the republican national convention at Chicago to nominate Mr. Roosevelt as the choice of the republican party for president. It might not be so logical, but it would be the sensible thing for the democratic convention to take a similar course. If Mr. Roosevelt feels that he cannot consistently accept another nomination, the people will not insist that he do so. They will, however, insist that he be on hand when the time comes for his inauguration.

Mrs. S. L. Bowen of Wayne, W. Va., writes: "I was a sufferer from kidney disease, so that at times I could not get out of bed, and when I did I could not stand straight. I took Foley's Kidney Cure. One dollar bottle and part of the second cured me entirely." Foley's Kidney Cure works wonders where others are total failures. The Pendleton Drug Co.

Hoboes Are Numerous.

One of the northbound freight trains that went through Salem Saturday was fairly alive with hoboes, says the Salem Statesman. It is estimated that there were over 100 on the train. A report from Eugene says that that city is almost overrun with the hobo element. A correspondent writes from Eugene as follows: "Yesterday on one of the freight trains was a gang of 50 or 60. The trainmen were helpless and telegraphed to Portland for instructions as to what to do. The reply came back to let them ride. People living near the railroad are greatly annoyed by them."

Put This Stove In Your Kitchen

It is wonderfully convenient to do kitchen work on a stove that's ready at the instant wanted, and out of the way the moment you're done. Such a stove is the New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove. By using it you avoid the continuous overpowering heat of a coal fire and cook with comfort, even in dog-days. The

NEW PERFECTION

is so constructed that it cannot add perceptibly to the heat of a room; the flame being directed up a retaining chimney to the stove top where it is needed for cooking. You can see that a stove sending out heat in but one direction would be preferable on a hot day to a stove radiating heat in all directions. The "New Perfection" keeps a kitchen uniformly comfortable. Three sizes, fully warranted. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.
