On Conclusions.

It doesn't pay to jump at conclusions. Once we had a dog that had a bad habit of jumping at conclusions. When he had no other animal's conclusion to jump at he would go round and round in a circle for an hour at a time trying to reach his own conclusion.

That puppy would wait until a cow had gone past and then jump wildly at her conclusion. As is the custom of people similarly afflicted, once he reached a conclusion he hung to it till he was kicked loose. As is usual also with people of similar proclivities, he was a dash gummied nuisance.

But one day that hasty pup jumped at a big, thoughtful bay mule's conclusion, and the next day we had to get a brand new dog. The old one wasn't even worth repairing.

No; it doesn't pay to jump at conclusions.

Why Not?

There recently entered the service of a Cleveland family a domestic of Scandinavian origin. She had never seen a refrigerator before, and the lady of the house, after initiating her into its mysteries, instructed her never to leave anything old or left over in the icebox, but to keep the refrigerator perfectly clean and fresh by throwing the old things away each morning.

The very next day the mistress, looking out of the window, observed something peculiar in the yard.

"What is that, Sophie?" she asked. "And how did it get there?"

"That is old ice, ma'am," was the proud response, "left over from yesterday. I threw it away lak you told me."—Harper's Weekly.

Thought He Proposed.

The day of the lady cop had arrived. "Halt!" exclaimed one of the gentler guardians as she stepped in front of the speeding automobile.

"Will you take my name, miss?" asked the courteous young man in the big machine.

She blushed to the roots of her hair. "Take your name?" she chirped.

"Why—why, this is so sudden."—Chicago News.

A Mistaken Impression.

"Of course," said the analytical questioner, "there is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "Too many of us are getting the idea that all a public question is fit for nowadays is to serve as the topic for a good talk."—Washington Star.

A Music Lover.

"Do you think you will give any musicals this winter?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumtux. "I like them. They give me a chance to keep still instead of inviting criticisms of my grammar from mother and the girls."—Washington Star.

It seems probable that an effort will be made by the reclamation service to enlarge the outlet to Tule lake in Southern Oregon, so as to drain a large portion of the lake bed and make it suitable for cultivation.

TELLS OF CLARKE

IN PRAISE OF THE LATE WOOLBUYER

J. B. Maddock Tells of the Coming of E. H. Clarke to Eastern Oregon—Was Always a Man of Fine Sentiment and High Ideals and Was Never Known to Oppress a Sheepman in Any of His Transactions.

J. G. Maddock, of Lyle, Wash., writes the following entertaining account of the first appearance and subsequent career in Oregon of the late E. H. Clarke, the well known woolbuyer who died in this city last week. That Mr. Clarke was always a gentleman of fine sentiments and high ideals is shown by Mr. Maddock's letter, which is as follows:

About 30 years ago, on a wellkept horse, there rode into Heppner a typical New Englander, arranged with fine taste in the habiliments of an English huntsman. His high boots, with a glossy shine, were particularly noticeable to the people about the late Hon. J. L. Morrow's store, the first building erected in town.

This man, fresh from the city, was E. H. Clarke, a prominent woolbuyer, whose death, after three days' sickness with pneumonia, at Pendleton, occurred last week, Monday.

It was E. H. Clark who gave financial assistance in stimulating the growth of the woolgrowing industry, especially in Morrow county. More than one successful woolgrower can attribute his advancement to money advanced on growing wool and the hard sense lectures on better breeds by the late E. H. Clark, known to many in Morrow county as "Woolly" Clark. The way he won the appellation was through the late James Jones, a sheepman noted for his originality. One day "Nelse," as he was better known, announced in Morrow's store that Clark was in the country.

Owing to there being many in the country of that name, he was asked what Clark. Mr. Jones, adjusting his hat to the back of his head, and whittling away on a stick—as he was wont to do—trying to think of the first name, at last uttered: "Oh, Woolly Clark." Just then E. H. Clark popped in the door and heard the utterance. It is needless to say that Mr. Clark paid for cigars for the crowd, and that Jones and he grew to be very close friends.

Of the thousands of dollars advanced yearly in Morrow county, E. H. Clark was never known to press anyone, or to lose a dollar. He aided with financial assistance the foundation of the woolgrowing in eastern Oregon. He was abreast with the times, possessed an educated and bright mind. He was a loyal friend and an honest gentleman.

ANOTHER JAP FLEET.

Pekin, China, April 29.—Claiming that the visit is purely friendly, another Japanese cruiser squadron has made its appearance in Chinese waters. The Chinese do not accept the friendly protestations and declare that the visit of the fleet is to frighten the Chinese into abandoning the anti-Japanese crusade.

The people are furious. The squadron is at anchor at Chingwang, near Taku. It consists of four cruisers.

For Republican Headquarters. The republican county central committee of which Asa B. Thompson is chairman, has secured a room in the Association building and will maintain headquarters there during the coming state campaign.

Another Motor Buggy.

J. W. McCormack has added a line of Columbus motor buggies to his auto stock and has been running about the city in one today. It is a covered machine.

ONE DAY MORE

Only one more day in which to get the special price of $33 per acre on the Irrigated Lands on the Deschutes river. Contracts must all be dated April 30th or earlier and be in hands of the company before May 10th. This makes ample allowance for any delays of the papers in the mails.

The State Land Board in granting this special price on the lands, provided that all contracts must be in the hands of the company, and show post mark at Bend, of date prior to May 10th.

I am anxious to see every Pendleton purchaser get this special price of $33, and I would urge every one interested in the land, to make a selection at once, and if for any reason the piece selected does not suit you, you have the right to change it for any other piece that suits you better, within 90 days of the date of your contract.

JUST THINK! You can secure 40 acres of fine land with a perpetual water right (and plenty of water too) for a payment of one-fourth down ($330.00) and the balance in annual payments of $330.00 with interest at 6 per cent. If you improve or cultivate one-eighth of the land the company will extend your second payment over to the fourth year at 6 per cent, enabling you to make all your payments off the land.

Four years from today, when your land is all paid for, it will be worth $100 to $150 per acre.

No country has a more delightful climate, and surroundings than this. Rivers full of fish, mountains near, with all kinds of game, a dry atmosphere with 320 days of sunshine in a year. Make a special effort to get hold of a piece of this land within the next day or two.

You can't lose, for the price goes up to $40 per acre day after tomorrow, May 1st.
