

CEMENTS BOND OF RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND SISTERS

Washington, May 11.—To the many memorable events of the past year or two which have emphasized in a formal, but none the less real, way the development of closer relations of friendship and commerce between the United States and her sister republics of the new world, must be added one other, the laying of the cornerstone for the office building of the Bureau of American Republics with solemn ceremonies this afternoon. This is the building which has been designated as the Pan-American peace palace, and toward the cost of which Andrew Carnegie contributed three-quarters of a million dollars.

The cornerstone laying was made notable by the presence of the president of the United States and many of his cabinet, by the representatives of the South and Central American governments, by the supreme court, by the senate and house of representatives and a large proportion of Washington's population.

Great attention was paid to the care and comfort of the thousands who were accorded an opportunity to witness the exercises and to listen to the address of President Roosevelt. The central location made the scene of the ceremonies within easy access of all. Flags and bunting were everywhere and the colors of the various American republics were profusely displayed. Stand after stand was provided and high above all the other vantage places was the president's box, which was large enough to accommodate the diplomatic representatives of the South and Central American countries.

Palms and growing plants were there and the faint touch of the new green of the trees shading off into the richer green of the park made an inspiring picture. To this add the flags of the various nations and the bright scarlet uniforms of the Marine Band and the picture is complete.

President Roosevelt, accompanied by Secretary Root and Director John Barrett, of the Bureau of American Republics, arrived comparatively early. When the president came into view of the immense audience a roar of kindly welcome greeted him. Immediately after the arrival of the president the numerous other dignitaries who were to figure prominently in the ceremonies, put in an appearance.

The address of President Roosevelt was, of course, the chief feature of the ceremonies. Cardinal Gibbons delivered the invocation and there was a cordial greeting from Andrew Carnegie. Secretary of State Root made an address, special cabled messages of congratulation were read by Senor Nabuco, the Brazilian ambassador; Senor Caio, minister of Costa Rica; Senor Cruz, minister of Chile; and Senor Godoy, charge d'affaires of the Mexican embassy.

In the cornerstone was placed a hermetically sealed box. This contained among other things, copies of the Washington newspapers, a copy of the official journal of the Bureau of American Republics, an engraving and autograph of President Roosevelt, autographs of the presidents of the Latin-American republics and of their diplomatic representatives in Washington, and a number of other articles.

The building of the Bureau of American Republics will be among the costliest and finest structures in the national capital. It will house the offices and museum of the Bureau of American Republics, an institution which was founded 17 years ago, at the first Pan-American conference held in Washington in the winter of 1889-1890, and presided over by James G. Blaine. The original object, as then announced, was that of making the American republics better acquainted with each other and of exchanging information about their respective resources and trade.

It never, however, had the complete support and interest of the United States, or of her sister nations, until Secretary of State Root made his memorable visit in 1906 to South America. The third Pan-American Congress, assembled in Rio Janeiro in that year, passed strong resolutions in favor of reorganizing the bureau, and outlined the plan to make it a world-recognized institution for the promotion of the commerce and comity. The new home of the bureau will be completed some time next year. Its cost will be approximately $1,000,000, of which Andrew Carnegie contributed $750,000 and the several American republics about $250,000. The old Van Ness Park, which was acquired some time ago for the purpose, will afford almost five acres of ground for the building and its surroundings, and it will have a frontage of about a square on the White lot on one side and an equal frontage on Potomac park on the other. The building will be entirely of Georgia marble, from the Marble Hill quarries, one of the richest in the state.

WHEN WAS TAFT BORN?

There was born to "Teddy" Roosevelt and "Virginia," the noted camels of the Far East, so long used on the Desert of Sahara, in initiating prominent Americans into the mysteries of the Egyptian fold, a baby camel which has been named "Taft," by H. H. Tammen, general manager of the Sells-Floto Circus, in honor of Hon. William Taft, Secretary of War. The birth occurred the evening of March 23, 1908, after the winter quarters of the Sells-Floto Circus at Venice, Cal., had been closed to visitors.

Exactly at Midnight.
On what day was "Taft" born?—March 23 or March 24? Taft will be at Pendleton Saturday, May 30, with the Sells-Floto Circus, rain or shine.

DOWNWARD COURSE.

Fast Being Realized by Pendleton People.

A little backache at first. Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak. Urinary disorders quickly follow; Diabetes and finally Bright's disease.

This is the downward course of kidney ills.

Mrs. Laura McClure, living at 1313 Madison avenue, La Grande, Ore., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for three or four years and the best possible results have always been obtained. Any over-exertion or the contraction of a cold often served to bring on backache and at such times by kidneys would be weak and I would be greatly annoyed by dizzy spells. I would be restless and nervous and as a result of the loss of sleep, would arise in the morning feeling tired and worn out. Learning of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box took them according to directions and they relieved me at once. I have kept them in the house since as I have the greatest confidence in them. When I feel any of the attacks coming on I immediately resort to Doan's Kidney Pills and they never fail to give the desired results."
