HUNGRY BUZZARD REVEALS DEAD MAN.

Baked Potato Charm Is Means of Identification.

Guided to the spot by the hovering of a buzzard, the remains of Peter Gannon, familiarly known as "Doc Dandy," who disappeared from Stayton several weeks ago, were found imbedded deep in the mire of a ditch in Stayton, late yesterday, by E. Weddie, a citizen of that community, says a special to the Telegram. Coroner Clough was notified, but since identification of the body was considered conclusive, no inquest was held, and it will be buried today. The body was so badly decomposed that identification would have been impossible were it not for an old watch found in one of the pockets and the finding of an old baked potato in the pocket of an inner pair of trousers, which he always carried as a charm against rheumatism.

"Doc Dandy" was an eccentric man, about 73 years old, and one of his idiosyncrasies of recent years was to wear all the clothes in his possession at one time. He was originally educated for the priesthood, but took a course in a veterinary college in Glasgow, Scotland, from which he graduated and came to America. He served during the civil war as a veterinary surgeon under General Nelson A. Miles, and afterward came to Oregon and settled in Stayton, where he has resided ever since. He drifted into the liquor habit, which is supposed to have been the cause of his death. He had a family once, but his wife died and he is supposed to have a son living, but his whereabouts are unknown.

VOTERS SIGN BALLOTS.

Funny Incident in Connection With Primary in Coos.

One of the many funny incidents which happen at an election occurred at the Deer Park precinct last Friday, and caused considerable amusement around the county clerk's office, on Tuesday of this week, says the Coquille Sentinel. Instead of the judges of the election sending the ballot boxes the clerk received a short letter and sample ballots from that precinct. The letter was as follows:

Deer Park, Ore., April 17, 1908.
County Clerk, Coquille, Ore.

I enclose herewith the vote of Deer Park today. Too much rain; voters stayed in the hills.

What shall we do with the ballot boxes?

The vote was four republican tickets and one democratic ticket. Each ticket was marked as the voter had voted; the three republican tickets were signed at the bottom by the voter and the democratic ticket was signed by the lonely democrat.

SIoux WARRIORS

SELLS-FLOTO SHOWS
HAVE REAL INDIANS

Circus Press Agent Says His "Reds" Have Taken Paleface Sculps—Also Declares One of Them Eats Dogs, Another Rattlesnakes, While a Third Takes to Icecream and Sweetmeats—Many Historical Characters in the Lot.

Saturday, May 30, to Pendleton will come a new tribe of genuine Indians, Sioux warriors, who have to their belts the sculps of many palefaces. They are government Indians and are from their reservations by special permission of the powers that be at Washington. At their head are noted chiefs. One has for his favorite diet rattlesnakes and eats one rattler a day. Another is a glutton for dogs and prefers the French poodle. Still another is select and takes to sweetmeats. Ice cream is his favorite eating. In their band is the daughter of Spotted Tail, who was one of the worst Indians ever on the plains. His record is steeped in blood. The squaws of the tribe are fine specimens and the papooses are interesting, indeed. There is nothing so cunning as a weebit of an Indian baby. One little Indian girl is the child of Chief Little Wound and her name is "Lone Flower." She received this name in a peculiar way and it stands for joy and for sorrow, both to the red man and the pale face.

Chief Little Wound was in the battle of Wounded Knee and fought a hand to hand contest with General L. L. Colby, now of Beatrice, Neb. The Indians were worsted and driven from the field. They left their babies and the U. S. soldiers picked them up and took them home. General Colby got Little Wound's daughter. He raised and educated her. She is known by the appropriate name of "Lost Bird." Being parted from her sister, the Indians called the little sister at home "Lone Flower."

All these Indians are with the Great Sells-Floto show ("The Shriners' circus") and will put on the wild west for the show here, Saturday, May 30. They will be in the street parade. Doors open at 1 and p. m. Performances, 2 and 8 p. m.

STATE FLOWERS.

The names of the the flowers adopted as emblems for the different states are, as far as ascertained, as follows: California, poppy; Colorado, columbine; Delaware, peach blossom; Maine, pine cone; Michigan, apple blossom; Nebraska, golden rod; Utah, lily; Georgia, rose; Kansas, sunflower; New Hampshire, oak leaf; Vermont, red clover; Idaho, syringa; Washington, rhododendron; Oregon, grape leaf; Oklahoma, mistletoe; Connecticut, laurel; Massachusetts, fern; South Dakota, crocus; Wisconsin, trailing arbutus; Minnesota, moosehorn flower or lady slipper; Indiana, water lily; New York, rose; Ohio, golden rod; Iowa, wild rose; Illinois, golden rod.

Fortune for Charity.

Ten thousand dollars was left by Valentine H. Caldwell, deceased, of Albany, in his will for the aid of orphans and homeless children in Oregon. The will has been filed with the county clerk. George and William Caldwell, sons, are executors. He left property in Linn county valued at about $70,000. It is said the heirs of the estate will contest the bequest for charity.

The people in the vicinity of Roy and Alder, Pierce county, Wash., are thoroughly aroused by the depredations of a band of horse and cattle thieves which is believed to have its headquarters in the foothills near those towns. Horses, cattle and hogs are being carried off almost nightly and there is strong talk of organizing posses to try and capture the men.

University of Oregon and Whitman college athletes will strive for honors at Walla Walla Wednesday.

SPRAY FOR LAWS.

Experiments Prove Dandelion Can Be Killed.

Two special nuisances in lawns are dandelions and plantain. The tests made at the North Dakota experiment station have given good results in killing these pests by spraying. It requires persistent work, but if a lawn is sprayed once each month, or once in six weeks, the dandelion is kept completely in check. As seeds are blown to great distances by the wind, the destruction of the established roots does not insure future freedom from the pest, but spraying is the easiest and most effective method of keeping the dandelions down which has yet been found. Use iron sulphate in the proportion of two pounds for each gallon of water. Do not spray within two days of the time of cutting and do not cut the grass or water the lawn for two or three days after spraying.

Epidemic Stamped Out.

The smallpox epidemic has been stamped out at Missoula, Mont., the last of the patients having been released from the pest house. More than 50 cases of the disease were treated here during the past four months.

The family of George Davis, living six miles west of Cottonwood, Idaho, was routed out of bed Friday night by a fire which completely consumed the house. The flames were started from a defective flue. Only a small amount of wearing apparel was saved.
