POISONED ARROW KILLS.

Wound Received from Arizona Indians Never Healed.

North Yakima, Wash., May 23.—After almost continuous illness since the middle of January Ralph K. Nichols, clerk of Yakima county, died here Wednesday afternoon, aged 65 years. For two weeks Mr. Nichols' condition had been hopeless and he had suffered greatly.

His malady was caused, it is believed, by a wound made by a poisoned arrow received in a fight with some Indians in Arizona, while a railroad surveyor. This wound never healed and was kept open by daily dressings. Last winter the poison of the wound got into Nichols' system and a general breakdown followed.

Nichols was educated in Massachusetts and went to California in the early days. By turns he was surveyor, sheriff and attorney. He made and lost three fortunes and leaves sufficient property for the needs of his sole surviving relative, a niece. In this country, to which he came 20 years ago, Nichols had held several offices with credit. He was a prominent Mason and recently organized the local commandery of the Knights Templar.
