AMONG THE EXCHANGES OF THE INLAND EMPIRE

Barnes to Plead Insanity.

Insanity will be the plea of "Bud" Barnes, says the Walla Walla Bulletin.

The man who is waiting trial for the brutal killing of Mrs. Anna Aldrich will endeavor to escape the gallows by claiming mental irresponsibility.

At first it was thought that this man would simply try to brazen it out that he had seen Mrs. Aldrich in Walla Walla at least three days after she was killed and thet he was not with her, when witnesses have been found who will swear that he was seen in her company near the scene of the murder.

Barnes' attorneys, however, have succeeded, it is claimed, in convincing him that the only possible way in which his neck can be saved is to plead insanity.

Barnes will be defended by Attorneys Oscar Cain, C. H. Hurspool and F. A. Garrecht, who were appointed by the court. They wil make a stubborn fight for their client.

Prosecuting Attorney Otto Rupp will be in charge of the case for the state. He will probably be assisted by T. P. and C. C. Gose, and Deputies John H. McDonald and H. C. Bryson.

The case will be called in superior court June 8, and will attract a great deal of interest. There are over 40 witnesses for the prosecution.

Pindell Loses Last Hope.

An opinion rendered by District Judge Steele in Moscow yesterday destroys the last hope of Frank Pindell, convicted of cattle stealing and sentenced to serve three years in the state penitentiary at Boise, says the Lewiston Teller.

Pindell was convicted at the last term of the district court and a motion for a new trial and a bill of probable cause was filed before the adjournment of the term here. The argument of the motion for a new trial was made in Moscow and the order of the court was received yesterday by County Attorney Needham. The notice received by Mr. Needham states the motion for the new trial is overruled and an order made vacating the certificate of probable cause.

Pindell was a prominent stockman and farmer of the Ilo section and was first arrested last winter on a charge of cattle stealing. He was tried and acquitted in the district court at that time, but was again arrested this spring on a similar charge and his conviction secured at the last term of the court.

Mysterious Surveyors.

The Potlatch Star, published at Cameron, in its issue of May 22, says:

"A party of surveyors are at work surveying a route for a railroad from the Clearwater river to Pine creek and thence out to the top of the prairie. Some time ago a similar survey was made, but the course chosen was found to be too steep. So work was suspended and nothing more was done towards finding a better route until a short time ago. It now appears that the present plans of the company having the surveys made will prove feasible and that the road will actually be built—that the Potlatch prairie will soon be connected with the outside world by a railroad.

"Capitalists have at last begun to realize that we have one of the finest sections of country that the sun ever shown upon—that in natural resources, in climate, and, in fact, everything that goes to make up the home of wealth, pleasure and happiness, the Potlatch prairie is unsurpassed. They know that a railroad through such a country as this is will not only add a great deal to the value of all property in the country, but that it will pay large dividends to the stockholders in the road."

A Valuable Dog.

Mention has been made before in these columns of the dog "Buster" owned by the city, and the story was told about the services he rendered in catching hobos when they attempted to get away, says The Dalles Chronicle. The other day Buster was left in the park to watch some Indian prisoners at work there, while Jailer Beatty went on an errand to the pest house. The Indians were mowing the lawn; one of them grew thirsty and started to the fountain to get a drink, but Buster mistrusting that he wanted to get away, jumped on him and would not let him move from his work. When Beatty returned the Indian told him about the dog's actions. To look at the dog one would not consider he had much sense, but he has proven many times his value to the city in herding prisoners.

Range Grass Plenty.

Joe Prout, one of the forest rangers patroling a portion of the north Cascade reserve, is in the city today and tells of bountiful range in the mountains this year, says The Dalles Chronicle. "I think the range is better than I ever saw it before," said Mr. Prout. "Even this early in the more favored spots the grass is fine and rank. The mild winter has been exceptionally kind to mountain vegetation and I predict a fine summer range for the stock which is annually taken onto the Cascade reserve."

Mr. Prout is in the city to confer with a party concerning securing the right to take out poles from the reserve.

Wool Coming to Baker City.

C. S. L. Smith, a prominent sheep man of John Day, recently brought in from that place 300,000 pounds of wool to Baker which has been placed in the local wool warehouse, says the Baker City Herald. Considering that this amount is wool from only one place the quantity that will be brought to this city and other wool centers promises to be almost unlimited.

BIGGEST CIRCUS OF YEAR WILL BE HERE SATURDAY

Van Tells How Orphans Enjoyed Free Exhibition.

The big Sells-Floto shows, known for years as the circus beautiful, will be here Saturday. It is unquestionably and by all odds the biggest and best circus to be seen in Pendleton this year.

Early this season this circus gave a free exhibition to 6000 orphans at the orphan's home in California and Van, the special writer in the Los Angeles Examiner, in describing the event says:

You have never seen horses compare with the horses of your first circus; never seen bareback riders like the ones you saw that day; never caught your breath at the trapeze artists in the same way; never laughed so much at the clowns since. It was your first circus. Think back 20 or 30 or 40 years and you will know just how that great crowd of children thrilled and chilled and screamed by turns. There was no little boy to turn up his nose and say:

"Hum! Think he's funny? Why, I seen a clown feller that—"

It was all new to those children yesterday—every bit of it. And I do not know how many little boys fell in love with the pretty little girl who drove the trained llama or how many little girls fell in love with the handsome little boy who turned cart wheels so gracefully.

There was nothing which escaped the little ones. Their sharp eyes were everywhere—now with the performing elephants; now with John Carroll and his trick Arabians. And the clowns—how they worked yesterday. Why a clown got a round of applause if he so much as turned around and their best tsunts drew a perfect and their best stunts drew a perfect ties.

Peerless Potters Please Kids.

The Peerless Potters came on—five of them, in light blue silk tights and the children watchced them curiously as they climbed to their perches under the roof. The first time that the original Mr. Potter tossed one of the other Potters whirling half way across the tent and another Potter caught him by the wrists just as he was about to fall, 6000 children drew breath through set teeth. My! But that was a close call!

And when the flying Potter was safe on the platform again, the cheers came in dead earnest. Not from one section of the tent, but from the whole round ring—a great burst of children's cheers—and the original Mr. Potter stood up and smiled all over. He smiled so much that he had to blow his nose very hard—but he may have had a cold and it may have been sweat that he wiped out of his eyes. He was the man who wanted to please the children and when he walked out of the ring he had his reward in full, for 6000 children can make quite a noise when they set about it.

And everybody stayed for the concert. The man who said the price was 10 cents changed his mind about it and asked everybody to keep their seats.

Then there was one last look at the animals, one lingering goodbye to all the wonderful sights and sounds and the children poured out into the sunshine again.

ARNSPIGER IS ASSOCIATE.

Former Pendleton Boy Will Help Coach U. of O. Football Team.

The Oregon Weekly, issued by the University of Oregon, says of Olin Arnspiger's promotion to the position of assitsant coach of the U. of O. football team for the coming season:

Olin Arnspiger, '07, has been elected assistant football coach for the coming season. Arnspiger's record as the headiest football player in the northwest made the choice of the athletic council an easy one.

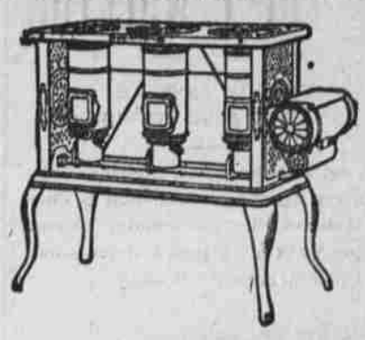
The council has decided that there will be no Vancouver trip for Oregon track athletes. Manager Bean has been empowered to take eight men to the Portland meet, June 6. If there are eight men who desire to enter that contest Oregon will be represnted. Most of the athletes are more or less indifferent about entering a club meet, and it may be that no team will enter.

The Seattle trip for decoration day will be made with 12 men, which means that two of the regular track team will have to remain at home.

It is a pity to see a person neglect indication of kidney or bladder trouble that may result in Bright's disease when Foley's Kidney Remedy will correct irregularities and strengthen these organs. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy at the first sign of danger. Pendleton Drug Co.

A federal grand jury was broken up in Moscow, Idaho, Thursday, by the death of one of the jurors, E. S. Stevens of Corleiu, Idaho. When he failed to show up in the morning, the judge sent a bailiff to bring him into court, but he was found dead in bed at his hotel.

Don't Heat the Kitchen



All the necessary family cooking may be done as well on a New Perfection Wick, Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove as on the best coal or wood range.

By using the "New Perfection" Oil Stove, the annoyance of an overheated and stuffy kitchen is entirely avoided, even in midsummer. The construction of the

WHEAT RAISING IN THE UPANDS OF BRAZIL

Consul General George E. Anderson of Rio de Janeiro, states that in view of the one time great trade in American flour in Brazil, and as bearing upon the continuation of that trade for which many American exporters are now working, in connection with the preferential tariff reduction Brazil offers on American flour, the reported results of recent official and private experiments in wheat growing in the state of Rio Grande do Sul are of unusual interest. He reviews the outlook as follows:

The state of Rio Grande do Sul, the southernmost state of the Brazilian republic and the one therefore with the coldest climate, has long been pointed to by Brazilian statesmen as a possible granary for Brazil. It has been thought that modern and scientific culture of wheat in the state would do much toward removing Brazil from its presnt necessity of importing all its bread stuffs, and there has been a strong movement from time to time toward fixing a higher duty upon foreign wheat for the protection of the Brazilian product.

In line with these ideas and in response to the demand of capital for actual practical information as to the posibilities of wheat growing in Brazil, an organization was formed in Rio Grande do Sul and a wheat-growing expert from Germany brought over to conduct the experiments.

This expert has been at work for the past two seasons, and in the course of his work has gone over the possible wheat-bearing area of the state quite thoroughly. At first he examined the country along the railway from the city of Rio Grande do Sul to Bage, a distance of about 150 miles.

The country in the vicinity of Porto Novo and Pelotas, cities of considerable impotrance, and a district of which much was expected, was found to be entirely unsuited to wheat growing. Further in the interior better results were had, and the country about the rivers Candiota, Jaguarao, Jaguarao-chico, and the Negro was found to be capable of producing rather fair grain.

Government Experiments.

In the course of the work experiments were conducted as far north as Cruz Alta and as far south as Jaguarao and to the west as far as Uruguayana. The terrtiory which the investigtor found most suitable to wheat growing was that of Uruguayana and Quarahy, a comparatively small area in the extreme western portion of the state in a wedge-shaped district extending between Paraguay and Uruguay. Similar land suitable for the grain was also found extending along the southern border of the state from Uruguarana to D. Pedrito, but the entire area was limited.

Along the southern border of the state in the district mentioned the state purchased a number of sites for extensive experiments, the work being handicapped by the extremely high price placed upon the land by its proprietors as soon as the possibility of wheat raising became known.

On the state land seven varieties of wheat were tried, those common to northern Europe, two varieties common in Italy, a new variety of Italian wheat, and the variety of wheat heretofore raised for various purposes in the state. As a result of the first year's work it was shown that the varieties of wheat common to northern Europe were not suited to growth in Brazil. The two Italian varieties, Barletta and Rieti, both acclimated to Argentine, gave fair results. The native wheat also made good returns and a new variety of Italian wheat, the Fucense, gave indications that it would probably be easily acclimated.

During the last season experiments were continued with those varieties of wheat which had given the better results during the first season. The average result was considered that shown by one lot of land where 6 hectares of land, well sown and intensively cultivated, produced 4600 kilos of wheat) substantially 12 bushels to the acre), the common native wheat being used. The season was exceptionally dry and the experimenters considered that this indicated a probable yield of 1200 kilos per hectare in an ordinary year (about 19 bushels to the acre.
