NEW OREGON CODE

COMMISSION NEED TO CLASSIFY THE LAWS

Attorneys Complain of Unsatisfactory Condition of Oregon Laws—Next Legislature Will Be Asked for a Commission to Codify and Publish State Laws.

Oregon is to have a new code revised and annotated and brought up to date, together with the constitution printed in the front as it now is and not as it was a half century ago, says the Oregon Daily Journal. At least that is the plan of the lawyers of the state who contend that the statutes have come to such a tangle that it is becoming practically impossible to tell what the law really is without long and laborious search through session laws, antiquated code and initiative enactments.

Goaded by the condition which confronts them daily in their practice of the law the members of the state bar association, and of the Multnomah County Bar association, are planning to advance upon the legislature next January and demand redress and surcease from unnecessary tribulation, worry and work.

The state association will have an annual meeting some time during the late summer and fall and then the matter will be given full discussion and a plan of campaign will be mapped out. According to the present program the association will ask the legislature for a code commission to revise the laws of the state and put them in good and convenient form.

It is probable that to make sure their wishes and ideas are carried out they will draft a bill for submission to the legislature providing for the commission and its work. Then committees will be appointed to bear the bill to Salem, present it to the legislature and stay by it until it has been given the seal of the legislature's approval.

Present Code Antiquated.
The Bellinger & Cotton code is antiquated and not only that but it is out of print. Outside of a few copies in the possession of the secretary of state for the use of the next legislature there are no copies to be had.

owing to the fact that the plates of the Oregon code were destroyed in the San Francisco fire with the plant of the Bancroft-Whitney company.

At the time of the last session of the legislature it was said that there were less than 50 new copies of the code in existence besides those furnished to the members of the legislature for their use during the session. It is a question, therefore, whether there will be copies enough to go around at the 1909 session, owing to the fondness shown for the big books by the members of the legislature, the majority of whom took their books home instead of returning them to the secretary of state.

Many New Laws.
Aside from the fact that the code is out of print is the further argument in the hands of the attorneys that the Bellinger & Cotton edition is antiquated. Since it was compiled five or six sessions of the legislature have intervened and several initiative elections have been held so that perhaps the majority of the statutes have been amended, some of them more than twice, others have been repealed and again enacted by subsequent legislatures in different forms, until the lawyer looking for a statute has to go through not only his code but different volumes of session laws to find the exact statute of any law.

To overcome this tangled condition the Bar association will ask for the code commission to revise the laws and put them in convenient code form so that they will be easy of reference and up to date. Leading members of the bar are confident that the legislature will grant their request.

SPLINTER OF GLASS MAY COST WOMAN AN EYE

Philadelphia, June 20.—An attempt to remove the cardboard seal from a milk bottle will probably cost Sally Morton, 39 years old, the sight of her eye. When the knife which she had inserted under the edge of the cap slipped off the rim of the bottle and flew into her left eye. The fragment lodged directly in the ball of the eye, causing acute pain. In her attempts to remove the object she imbedded it deeper in the wound. She was taken to University hospital, where physicians fear that they cannot save the eye.

COMPANY L WILL SHOOT INSTEAD OF CAMP

Weather Conditions and New Ammunition Cause Change of Program.

Instead of going to "Bean" creek for an encampment tonight company L will spend tomorrow on the company's target range on the Tutullia. An order to this effect was issued this afternoon by Lieutenant Smythe, commanding officer of the company. Members of the company who desire to shoot will assemble at the Armory at 8 o'clock and will go to the range under command of Lee Drake, acting first sergeant.

It was planned by the company to go into camp at the Oliver place this evening, but the unsettled condition of the weather and the arrival of a new stock of ammunition caused the plan to be changed.

Unless something unforeseen occurs the company will go into camp next Saturday night.

Those who can go to "Bean" creek are instructed to give their names at once to either Sergeant Drake or Sergeant Marsh.
