PEOPLE OF CROOK TO BUILD ROAD

WILL WAIT NO LONGER
ON E. H. HARRIMAN.

Tired of Senseless Delay, Enterprising Citizens of Eastern Oregon County Will Build Their Own Railroad—Portland Capital Will Assist in Good Work—Distance of 90 Miles.

Over in Crook county the inhabitants have reached the stage of desperation where people get out with picks, shovels and scrapers and build their own railroad in order to get crops to the markets, says the Portland Journal. This is the course that has been adopted by the business men and farmers of Bend, Prineville, Madras and other points. With an initial capital of $50,000 they propose to construct a railroad from Shaniko to the Columbia Southern terminus, to Bend, 90 miles.

The people of Crook county have grown tired waiting for railroad companies to do something toward giving central Oregon transportation, and they are going to start in to build their own road," said Jesse Stearns, counsel for the Deschutes Irrigation & Power company. "The Wilson creek basin last year produced 1,500,000 bushels of grain. The production and crop output are rapidly increasing year after year. The rains this year have helped conditions and there is promise of another great crop next fall. The people are freighting everything in and out of the county, 100 miles and further. They are getting tired. They have long deserved a transportation line from the existing roads, but they are still hauling their products to the nearest railroad, at Shaniko.

"The city of Portland has an opportunity here to do something real for central Oregon. It seems to us that the capitalists of Portland should be willing to do as much for their own state people as they would do for the Harriman railroad companies.

"On a certain occasion when a dinner brought the railroad people and the capitalists together the latter offered to take the necessary bonds to finance an extension of the Columbia Southern from Shaniko to Bend. The railroad company did not accept the offer. The people of Crook county now come forward with an offer to build the line and if the capitalists of Portland will make their former proposition good the road can easily be put through from Shaniko to Bend.

"The farmers are determined to go to extremes in an effort to get this line. They will go out with their teams and scrapers and will furnish food and do everything that can be done within reason to push this project through. The road can be built and with reasonable assistance from capitalists it can be built quickly."

It is said an easy grade, the maximum of which will be 2.3 per cent, has been found via Ward creek, and there will be no serious difficulty in constructing the line from Shaniko southward. Some surveys have been made by Chief Engineer Redfield, of the Deschutes Irrigation & Power company, who assisted in the construction of the original Columbia Southern. He has reported that it is practical to build a line that will serve present needs of Central Oregon.

The distance from Shaniko to Madras is 42 miles. With the line carried south even that far central Oregon would derive large benefits.

The Columbia Southern railroad was built from Biggs to Shaniko largely through the energy of a few men and the efforts of the farmers along the route. The demand for the road was so strong that it could not be resisted. It was constructed in the face of opposition from the O. R. & N. company, whose officials persisted in the assertion that the road could not be made to pay expenses.

In spite of these mistaken opinions the Columbia Southern has been a profit earner from the start. Traffic in central Oregon has vastly increased since that time. It is known that an extension of the Columbia Southern to Bend would be a profitable line. That it would extend Portland's trade and develop the territory directly tributary to this city is understood. Under existing Oregon laws such a line could secure equitable traffic arrangements with the Columbia Southern.

TO INCREASE CATTLE SUPPLY.

The Department of Agriculture is Searching for a New Grazing Plant.

To increase the supply of beef and thereby lessen its cost to the American householders is one of the principal objects underlying the efforts of the department of agriculture to find a protel that will thrive in the semi-arid regions of the northwest. Beef and beef products are said to have reached the highest prices recorded in 20 years and the dealers say that this is due to the scarcity of cattle.

It is to increase the supply of beef by increasing the protel belt in the west that the department of agriculture has sent N. P. Hansen of Brookings, S. D., to make a thorough investigation of the plant life of Northern Russia and Siberia.

Prof Hansen will visit the sections of Northern Europe and Asia where climatic conditions are similar to those of the semi-arid lands of Wyoming, Colorado, Montana and the Dakotas. If an alfalfa or clover can be found which will withstand these climatic conditions, 100 cattle could be grazed on the land now required for 10.

On his previous trips Prof. Hansen found fields of alfalfa on the steppes of Russia thriving in a climate corresponding to that of the western lands, which it is hoped will be reclaimed through his efforts.

Secretary Wilson first sent Prof. Hansen on an expedition for the development of agriculture in 1897. Since then he has made trips triennially for the department. As a result of one of these trips he introduced into this country the Turkestan alfalfa, which forms one of the principal crops in the states bordering on the 100th meridian.

Wedding in Chapel Royal.

London, June 22.—Chapel Royal, in St. James' Palace, was beautifully decorated today in preparation for tomorrow's notable wedding, when Miss Jean Reid will become the bride of John Hubert Ward. It is likely that King Edward and Queen Alexandra will be present at the ceremony. Although the attendance at the wedding will be restricted to personal friends and relatives of the bride and groom, the big reception to follow at Dorchester House, the London residence of Ambassador Reid, will attract all of the social leaders of London.

Finn Shoots Finn.

A shooting affray occurred in the Finnish confectionery store and pool hall at Red Lodge, Mont., a few days ago, by which John Heive, a Finn, was shot through the fleshy part of the upper portion of the left leg by Gus Karvonen, another Finn. Karvonen fled, but was captured. The shooting is said by bystanders to have been unprovoked. It is believed that the shooting was the result of some long standing trouble.

PETER WEST'S BUILDING SITE

PROCURER OF DIVORCES THINKS LOCATION IDEAL

Would Sell Entire Block Near Northern Pacific Depot for Postoffice Building and Park—Man for Whom "Sacred Tie" Has No Terrors Enumerates Advantages of His Property.

Pendleton, June 22.—(Editor East Oregonian.)—Under the head of possible sites for federal building, published in Saturday's issue of June 20, allow me to suggest block 74, now owned by Peter Medernach, Henry Schultz and Peter West, situated near both R. R. depots so that the R. R. could deliver the mail without any expense to the government.

This location could be purchased cheaper than any of the other property suggested, neither of which could furnish the 140x140 feet as required for the building.

This block could be made a very beautiful park besides. The building could be erected in the center of the block, and trees could be set out all around the block and flowers planted between the building and the trees. Cement walks could be built around the block, and leading to the building from the four corners of the block.

Benches (with a lazy back) all around and along the walks to the building. Fountains could be on every corner, and a tincup so that the dry town could at least furnish a cool drink of water during the hot summer days, while sitting on the benches under the beautiful shade trees, admiring the flowers.

Small tables might also be placed around the block close to the benches furnished with tablets, ink and pens and people might answer their letters just received and not wait until they arrived home, and then forget to answer.

A band stand might be erected and whenever the band wanted to practice let them amuse the people sitting on the benches.

Public speakers could use this band stand and chairs might be placed under the trees to accommodate thousands of listeners, and not have to stand in the street in the burning sun, like they did when Bryan was here near the court house (for he is coming again soon).

Farmers, strangers and everybody could find there a resting place because the saloons will be closed, which was the only place for a farmer or stranger, to be welcome and rest when in town.

There being no public or private park in the city, this location would be the only place for farmers and strangers, and in fact everybody, to find a welcome seat. I know of no other block in the city that can beat this one for a postoffice.

Respectfully submitted,
PETER WEST.

TO MAKE MEAL FROM ALFALFA.

Harry C. Edwards Has Applied for a Patent for His Mill.

Harry C. Edwards, who for the last four years has been connected with the Cyphers Incubator company at its mill in Kansas City, has made application at Washington for a patent on a new alfalfa mill, says the Kansas City Star. The machine is simple in construction, and the method employed in handling the hay from the bale until it is reduced to a meal is divided so as to prevent the continual accidents and breakdowns that are so common in the present methods.

The first mill is now being installed at Fowler, Kan. Because of the simplicity of construction, and the comparative cheapness of the new mill, Mr. Edwards says there will soon be more alfalfa mills in Kansas than there are flour mills.

"The demand for alfalfa meal is rapidly increasing," Mr. Edwards said yesterday. "The principal uses for it being in the manufacture of stock foods of different kinds by mixing them with the proper proportions of shorts, bran and corn meal. In this way it is made to produce results either for the dairyman or the market feeder. Most Kansas farms will yield from three to four cuttings of alfalfa a year. And in the high, dry parts of western Kansas, where crops are uncertain and raised with much difficulty, alfalfa flourishes."

"Selling as it does from $7 to $8 and $9 a ton at the farm, it is the most profitable crop that these farmers can raise. Besides it brings into the market and makes valuable land that would otherwise be practically waste."
