PENDLETON GIRL MAKING GOOD

MITYLENE FRAKER IS SOLOIST IN ORATORIO.

Has Been a Student of Willard Patten for Two Years and Takes Leading Part in Recent Production of "Isaiah" Set to Music by Patten Himself.

The following criticism of Willard Patten's "Isaiah" in the Minneapolis Daily News will be of interest to Pendleton people for the reason that Miss Mitylene Fraker, the vocalist of whom Pendleton is justly proud has been a student of Willard Patten for two years and was the contralto soloist in the production of the Oratorio on which the criticism was written.

"It is remarkable that none of the classic oratorio composers had anticipated our own Mr. Patten in setting the mighty prophet Isaiah to music. For in his extremes of vehemence, exaltation, dejection, and "perfect peace" Isaiah is a far mightier dramatic character than the dramatic personae of the Creation, Israel, Elijah, St. Paul, or even the Messiah himself.

"The text, as selected by Mr. Patten, presents proportionately more of the gentler side of the rugged prophet, fortunately for the honor of both. For, though the "indignation of the Lord" aria was great and greatly done, the chorus of a "great noise and devouring fire" was not up to classic greatness in composition nor in the miniature means at the composer-conductor's command, with his small chorus, string orchestra, organ and piano. The soprano aria, "Cry Aloud, Spare Not," is weakly distorted by its waltz rhythm.

But the contralto aria, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace," the chorus "But when He seeth His children," were most beautiful. The same remarkably high melodic character was especially sustained through the four consecutive numbers of the tenor's "Strengthen ye the weak hands," the two pastoral choruses, and the soprano's "Way of holiness." These formed the acme of the composition and gave it its beautiful and truer stamp as a cantata rather than a classic oratorio.

This presentation at the Wesley church, just 19 years after its first production was a modest commemoration of a work of which the composer and his home city may well be proud. The assisting soloists, especially in the more important tenor and baritone parts were able and thoroughly capable in the persons of Misses Cook and Fraker, Messrs. Carberry and Rosenthal.

Above all the credit for this fine opportunity is due to the composer himself in his added character as trainer of the chorus and as the conductor. It is earnestly to be hoped that Mr. Patten may be encouraged to not let more than one year slip by without a presentation of his "Isaiah" with its beautiful and edifying dominant tone of "joy and gladness."

PLAN TO DEVELOP FARMING LANDS

Portland Realty Board Discussed an Important Topic Last Night.

Organization for the purpose of developing the farming lands of Oregon was favored at the meeting of the Portland Realty board, in the rooms of the commercial club last evening, says the Telegram. Whitney L. Boise spoke at some length on the subject and his sentiments were endorsed in such a practical manner that the preliminary steps toward such an organization are already under way.

The idea is to have the large tracts of farming lands in the Willamette valley and eastern Oregon cut up into smaller holdings for the benefit of newcomers inured to improved systems of cultivation.

"In Marion county alone there are tracts of 300 to 4000 acres held under one ownership," said Mr. Boise, "and the cultivating of these large tracts is done in a slipshod manner, not at all conducive to their productiveness. Our object should be to have these large tracts divided among those who are content to adopt intensive farming methods in a few acres. The business can be managed in Portland as a central point, and the owners of the tracts permitted to share in the profits accruing from advanced values. Strangers might come to Portland and find out where the lands were available for cutting up, and this part of the business could be rendered profitable for the real estate men engaged in it here."

The organization of a real estate exchange was deferred until a future meeting of the board. W. A. Spanton was appointed to take the place of Mr. Jackson, who resigned from the committee in charge of the preliminaries.

The proposal to bring City Engineer Thompson of Seattle, to Portland to act as consulting engineer, was the subject for discussion, but no definite steps were taken.

Lid On In Burns.
Burns, Ore., June 25.—The city council since the last election has ordered all gambling stopped in the saloons and no card games for drinks will be allowed. The six days' celebration which was going to be held has fallen through since gambling will not be allowed, as the saloonmen have withdrawn their subscriptions. The council had to take some step of this kind to stop immigration of an undesirable class which would have come here after the surrounding counties had gone dry. There will be no pool-selling or gambling allowed of any kind on the horse races at the fair this fall. The county court ordered no whisky sold in the three precincts which voted for prohibition at the last election, but the order did not close any saloons, as there was none in the three precincts that went dry.

IRRIGATION FOR VALLEY FARMS

A. P. STOVER WRITES GOVERNMENT BULLETIN

Government Irrigation Expert Issues First Report on Investigations in Willamette Valley—Irrigation Is Reclaiming Worn Out Valley Farms.

The following sketch of the objects of the government investigations in irrigation in Willamette valley has just been issued by Arthur P. Stover, formerly in charge of the same work in Umatilla county. Further information on the subject will be published by the East Oregonian. Mr. Stover says:

The investigations dealt with in this report have for their object a determination of the value of irrigation for increasing and insuring the productiveness of the agricultural lands of the Willamette valley, Oregon.

This valley contains perhaps the largest single body of tillable land, outside of the great Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys in California, in the Pacific coast or Rocky mountain states. It is also one of the oldest settled sections of the west, a large part of its prairie and bottom land having been cultivated for more than 50 years. The rainfall during the winter months is very heavy but during the summer months it is so light as to constitute almost an arid condition in so far as the production of agricultural crops is concerned.

In the early days and up to within the last few years grain growing has been the predominant industry. The moist, early springs and dry summers were admirably adapted to the production of cereals, and it was but natural that the raising of grain should have been the leading industry.

However, under the strain of constant cropping to wheat and with only poor, shallow cultivation and no fertilization the soil gradually failed to yield profitable crops of grain. As a natural result of these conditions a change in agricultural methods has been taking place within the last few years, and the wheat ranch with its 320 to 640 acres or more of poorly cultivated soil is giving place to the small diversified farm with its crop rotation and its intense cultivation.

But the climate is not well adapted to this new system of agriculture. Grain was ripe and ready for harvest before the dry summer months came on, while the crops now being raised—clover, vetch, hops, small fruits and vegetables—extend their growth well into or through the dry season, if given the opportunity, and often suffer from a lack of sufficient moisture just at the time when needed to give the crop its best growth.

The purposes of the investigations now being made in the Willamette valley by the irrigation investigations of this office are to determine in a careful way just what benefits may be secured from the application of water to crops during the dry season.

son, what expense may be incurred for irrigation, and what methods should be employed to produce the best results.

Some progress has already been made toward the solution of these problems by a few who have been practicing irrigation in a small way, but little is known of their success outside of the immediate localities where the experiments were made, and even there little effort has been made to extend the practice.

A series of cooperative experiments was begun in the spring of 1907, the plans outlined including the following lines of work:

- (1) The collection of information bearing on the value of irrigation, dealing with the subjects of water supply, rainfall, soil conditions and the like.
- (2) The determination of the value of irrigation to different crops, the best methods of preparing land and irrigating it, the proper time of application and the various other practical questions connected with irrigation.
- (3) The giving of advice and the lending of assistance to those who wish to begin irrigating.

Keene Won $25,000 Purse.
James R. Keene's horse, Ballot, four years old, son of Voter, won the Suburban handicap at Sheephead Bay last week, valued this year at $25,000, says a racing paper. The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:02, being one-fifth of a second slower than the world's record for the distance, made by Broomstick at Brighton Beach, July 9, 1904. Broomstick was a three-year-old and carried 104 pounds. Ballot's impost was 127 pounds.
