DENVER'S GREAT CONVENTION HALL

Denver's mammoth auditorium, in which the democratic national convention will be held, is now almost ready and its doors will be formally thrown open tomorrow.

Over half a million dollars have been expended in the construction of the monster edifice, with the result that Denver now has one of the best buildings in the land for entertaining vast assemblages. Over 12,500 people can be comfortably seated within its walls, giving it a larger seating capacity than the Coliseum in Chicago, where the republican convention was held, or Madison Square Garden in New York.

A perfect heating and ventilating system and numerous exits, allowing the building to be emptied within three minutes, render it one of the most perfectly adapted halls of its kind in the world.

Arrangements for the democratic convention are now nearing completion. A platform and rostrum occupies the west side of the auditorium, with the seats for the delegates and alternates extending along the floor of the stage proper. Upon the platform will be 445 seats, which will be reserved for the members of the national committee and for the guests of honor. The number of seats on the rostrum will be 101.

Seats for the delegates in front of the rostrum are arranged nearly in the center of the building. The number of seats is 1065 and immediately behind this section are the seats of the alternates, also 1065 in number.

The main entrance is on Curtis street. On this side will be 1073 seats for the general public. The same plan prevails at the opposite end of the building, where 826 seats will be reserved for the general public. Back of these sections and also along the Fifteenth street side of the building are boxes with a total capacity of 544 seats. In addition there will be seating space for 700 people more at the Curtis and Champa street ends of the structure.

The front rows in the balcony and gallery will be reserved for the families of the delegates, alternates and convention officers. The actual seating capacity of the balcony will be 3626 and of the gallery 1859.

The auditorium is constructed without pillars or posts to obstruct the view, and the acoustic properties are so perfect that a speaker can be heard from any part of the building. The auditorium is fire proof, no wooden material of any sort being used in its construction, even the sashes in the windows and the lath being of iron.

A band of music will be stationed in each balcony. A signal wire will be run from each band stand to the desk of the sergeant-at-arms so that the musical program can be governed at will.

Absolutely no liquor will be allowed on the convention hall premises during the convention, and those whose enthusiasm requires to be fired by intoxicants will have to go beyond the "dry" zone to secure even a glass of beer.

GIRL WANTED TO SEE HOUSE BURN

Little Kathryn Carlin Set Fire to House While Mother Was Away.

Four-year-old Kathryn Carlin wanted to see what a house would look like afire. So she awaited her opportunity and when her mother was in another room, procured a block of matches and set fire to the structure, says the Portland Journal. Only the prompt response of the fire department forced the baby to forego the pleasure of watching her home burn.

Mrs. J. C. Carlin, the mother, was busy about her work when her son, Harry, aged 12 years, rushed in and excitedly told her smoke was issuing from under the porch.

"Run to the freighthouse and tell them! Quick!" shouted the alarmed woman.

The lad sprinted for engine-house 6, on Twentieth, between Raleigh and Quimby streets, in the meantime Mrs. Carlin and neighbors pouring water on the porch. When the firemen arrived they cut away a section of the porch and extinguished the flames before they had done material damage.

"Yep," said the little one when questioned, "I dropped a match down here to see what things would look like burnin'."

Mrs. Carlin, whose husband's vocation of saw maker and sharpener recently called him out of the city to a mill, said she had never been careful about where matches were placed, because the children had all been cautioned never to touch them, and hitherto had not disobeyed her injunction. "There will be no matches lying around this house in future, however," said the woman.

STOP STEAMBOAT RACING DALLIES-PORTLAND ROUTE

Port of Portland Engineer Declares Measures will be taken for the suppression of steamboat racing on the Willamette river, according to J. B. C. Lockwood, engineer for the Port of Portland, says The Dailies Chronicle.

He made this statement after receiving a complaint from Captain Gilbert, of the British ship Crown of India about the high rate of speed at which the steamers running from here to The Dalles are being operated.

Gilbert's complaint was discussed at a special meeting of the Port of Portland yesterday afternoon. His ship is moored near the drydock at St. John. He states that on Monday the steamers Bailey Gatzert and Charles R. Spencer passed by there under a full head of steam and came near causing his ship to break from her moorings. Heavy swells rolled against her and she rocked fearfully.

"That sort of work on the part of the river captains has to stop henceforth," says Engineer Lockwood. "If it is permitted to go on it will only be a question of time until some ship will be badly disabled. There is also danger that the drydock will be damaged."

NEW BANK FOR BOISE.

Bank of Idaho Organized With Capital of $100,000.

Articles of incorporation were filed this afternoon in the office of the secretary of state for the Bank of Idaho, an institution with a capital stock of $100,000 cash, which is to open the first of next week in the quarters occupied by the Capital State bank, the new institution having secured the use of the entire equipment of the building, says the Boise Capital News.

The new bank will open under the most favorable circumstances, having secured a well established banking location and the backing of some of the most substantial and able business men in the state. From the time the bank opens its doors for business there will be plenty of money on deposit for loans and the institution will be able to assist in the financial difficulties of the old bank by taking up some of the paper on which good securities have been given and turning them into cash, which can be used to pay the depositors.

ST. JOHN'S DRY.

Judge Gantenbein Dissolves Injunction of Saloonmen.

St. John will go dry in accordance with the vote at the last election. Judge Gantenbein, in the circuit court yesterday morning, upheld the motion of County Judge Webster and Commissioners Lightner and Barnes to dissolve the temporary injunction which had previously been issued against them compelling them to refrain from declaring St. John and University Park dry until a hearing was had in court, says the Oregonian.

The case was that of Ed Magoon, a St. John saloonkeeper, against the Commissioners. The prohibition question was voted on this year in Precincts 89, 90 and 91. It was the contention of the liquor forces that as Precinct 89 (University Park) went dry at an election held two and a half years ago, it could not be joined with a contiguous precinct for prohibition election purposes until a vote in Precinct 89 alone had been had.
