REV. BARD FOUND BOOZE.

Walla Walla Minister Says Oregon "Dry" Towns Are Not "Dry."
Rev. Andreas Bard, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, returned this morning from a trip to Portland, and other Oregon points, says the Walla Walla Bulletin. He will leave tonight for Loon lake to get his family and will then return to Walla Walla, later going to the beach, where he intends to erect a cottage.
Rev. Mr. Bard was telling this morning about some of the local option districts in Oregon.
"Talk about your dry towns all you like," he said. "Since I have seen some of them in abstinent Oregon I have formed an idea of my own. You know I have ever tried to be impartial and to avoid cant on either side. I had, therefore, assumed that, if prohibition had once become a law, that no liquors would be sold in the community."

ton Commercial association during the early evening and at 8:30 the Ellis home on Lewis street, will be thrown open for a public reception in honor of the secretary, who is a son of the martyred president, James A. Garfield.

A Thorough Inspection.
The party made a thorough inspection of the dam and reservoir, feed canal and lands under the Umatilla irrigation project and the most important feature of the secretary's visit here, is the announcement of the date of the opening of the remainder of the land under the project to settlement.

At the reception this evening Secretary Garfield will deliver a brief address and will probably review the project as he sees it and it is hoped that before he leaves for the east a date for the opening will be fixed.

The people of Hermiston have been greatly interested in the visit of Secretary Garfield to the irrigation project and every possible courtesy was shown the party today. Six double carriages were used in bearing the party over the project. This afternoon the Furnish ditch and the government feed canal near Echo were inspected and the vast idle tracts of rich land which can be reclaimed with water, were looked upon by the secretary and it is the hope of Umatilla county that he will look with favor upon any project to extend the Umatilla project canals to these idle lands in future. The party will leave for the east on No. 6 in the morning.

Indians to See Garfield.
A large number of the prominent Umatilla Indians will come to the city this evening to meet Secretary James R. Garfield at the home of Congressman Ellis. The Indians have just been favored by a visit from Commissioner Leupp of the Indian department and are delighted to have the opportunity to meet the secretary of the department of the interior. A number of the prominent members of the tribe have visited Washington and have met presidents and secretaries, and to them the experience will not be new, but to the large majority of the tribe it will be an especially delightful event to meet one of the most prominent government officials.

LIVING SKELETONS

LIVING ON BARK.
Starving Thousands in China Glad Enough to Get Anything to Eat.

In northern China people were eating bark off the trees when Osborne Middleton was there on a tour from Shanghai. That was about a month ago, according to a letter received by his son, O. Middleton, Jr., who is manager of the Oregon Pine Export Lumber company, says the Portland Journal.

The country had been swept by fearful dust storms, so that nearly everywhere the growing crops lay buried under four or five inches of dust. Supplies had run low and the people were without money. Thousands managed to keep body and soul together by peeling bark off the trees and subsisting thereon. Some were so badly starved that they looked more like skeletons than living beings.

The writer says thousands will undoubtedly perish before anything can be done to relieve them. Many were on the verge of death when Mr. Middleton left Tien Tsin, about four weeks ago. They did not seem to know where to look for help.

Mr. Middleton has been in China more than 40 years and is thoroughly acquainted with conditions there and the people. He has visited Portland several times during his stay in the Orient and expects to spend a few weeks here this fall.

WHAT FORESTRY IS DOING.

Fire Losses Reduced and Millions Saved.

The hostility of western people against some of the aggressions and arrogance of the federal bureau are well justified and should be maintained, says a magazine review. There is a little too much pork in the dish of beans that is being served out and this paper has not been behind hand in commenting upon the facts. And yet, the forestry bureau has done some good service in other directions and it is but just to call attention to it. Thus in an article in the July McClure's on the forestry bureau, Will C. Barnes tells of the enormous saving to the government by the checking of forest fires.

If the forest service had done no more than keep down the fire losses, their work would not have been in vain. In 1901 the total area burned over in the government forest equalled 2 3/4 acres in every thousand, while in 1907 the burned area was only 9-10 of an acre in every thousand. No record of the money value of the earlier fire losses was kept, but that the loss ran into millions, no one who has seen the miles of burned over tracts can doubt.

The following table shows the fire losses in the national forests for the past three years:

Year	Area of Forests	Acres Burned	Value of Timber Burned
1905	$5,627,000	297,592	$101,282
1906	106,999,000	115,416	75,183
1907	164,154,000	212,850	31,589

That is, in 1905 the loss from fire was more than three times as great as in the year 1907, with an area of forests almost twice as great to protect and control.

Powder Valley Crops Short.

Owing to the unusually scanty rainfall of the last few months, Powder valley is beginning to present a semi-desert like appearance. Some of the crops are as good as they have been in previous years, but others are almost a failure. The farmers are somewhat discouraged over the small returns now promised for their year's work, yet they say this is one of the exceptional years which can not be avoided. They are hopeful that prices will be large enough this fall to make up in a small degree at least, for the small yield.

Many of the prominent farmers report that the hay crop, alfalfa, wild hay and timothy and clover, will show little shortage this year. The average tonnage per acre will be fully as large as last year and the quality of the hay will be good. Alfalfa is already to cut and hay harvest on the large meadows producing wild hay will begin in a few days. It is rumored, however, that some of the hay meadows will not produce a good crop because of late frosts and lack of winter snow and spring rain.—Baker City Herald.

Editor Awarded Substantial Damages.

The United States Express company last week paid to his attorneys $5000, the amount of damages awarded J. B. Kraft, city editor of the Hazelton (Pa.) Daily Standard, by the United States court of appeals for injuries he sustained about two years ago by being struck in the abdomen by the shaft of an express wagon while riding on a trolley car to his home.

LICENSE TO DRINK.

New Plan Evolved by Brain of Washington Statesman.

"Got a license to drink?" This question will be asked of their thirsty patrons by the barkeepers of the state of Washington, if the plan suggested by E. E. Hall, a republican politician of Spokane, is put into execution.

In order to settle the liquor problem, Hall recommends that all license restrictions be removed from the sale of intoxicants and that the drinkers be made to pay a license fee. Licenses would be issued only to temperate and respectable adults and a heavy penalty would be imposed upon anyone selling or giving liquor to those not possessing a permit to drink from the state.

SEEKS TO PRESERVE THE INDIAN MELODIES

Edgar S. Fischer of This City Engaged in Work of Gathering Up Aborigines' Songs.

Edgar S. Fischer of the Fischer School of Music, arrived from Pendleton yesterday afternoon, where he went to consult with Commissioner Leupp of Washington, D. C., in regard to methods of perpetuating the Indian melodies, says the Walla Walla Bulletin. Mr. Fischer has been for the last two years compiling songs and melodies of some of the Indian tribes for E. S. Curtis of Seattle, who is preparing the most elaborate compendium of North American Indian history ever undertaken.
